Dear Pat:

I apologize for the delay in getting back to you. I have had sickness in the family and other various and sundry things that have limited my Family Tree time. Things are looking up now though I'm happy to say.

Enclosed are my family group sheets on John B. & Sarah Elizabeth Wheat Brewer, whose son, William Jefferson Brewer was my great-grandfather.

I am particularly interested in your card on Burrell B. Brewer (s/o Burwell Brewer). According to my information (from research of others), Burrell had a son named William b. 1758 in VA, d. abt 1815-1820 in Oglethorpe Co., GA. This is believed to be the Lt. William Brewer who served in the Revolutionary War and who came with some of his children to Washington Parish, LA in 1812-1814. Lt. William's ch coming to LA: George, John (m. Patience ?Sibley in GA - from which my line descends), Elizabeth (m. Leslie Bankston), Sarah (m. Simeon Coates Bankston) and ? Baalum.

If you can shed any light or offer any suggestions to help me clear up Burrell and Burwell Brewer, I would be very grateful. I will keep your cards on hand and if and when any information I think you would be interested in surfaces will certainly pass it on.

Regards,

Eyvonne

John B. Brewer

JOHN [5] B. BREWER, only son of John and Patience Brewer, born about 1820 in Louisiana and married about 1843 in Mississippi Sarah Elizabeth Wheat (born in 1825 in Mississippi). In 1850 John B. and Elizabeth are in the Census of Marion and Hancock Counties; in 1860 they were back in Washington Parish. They had 10 children. Elizabeth died sometime in the 1860s. The 1870 Census listed John as a farmer. It is said that at one time he operated a ferry on the Pearl River around Poole's Bluff - the vicinity of what we now know as Bogalusa, LA. The census shows he had married a Louise McCoy and he had a son born from this marriage. The older children had left home as per records which read: John 51 male farmer; Louise 31 female housewife; William 21 male farming; Roland 18 male farming; Mary 17 female at home; Sarah 16 female at home; Monroe 14 male at home; Adolphus 9 male at home; Walter 3 1/2 male born March 1870. It is well to remember that only a few people could read or write and many times did not remember their exact age. Note here: John 51 would make him born in 1819. John died in Pike County, Mississippi about 1878, buried in Amite Co., MS, site unknown.

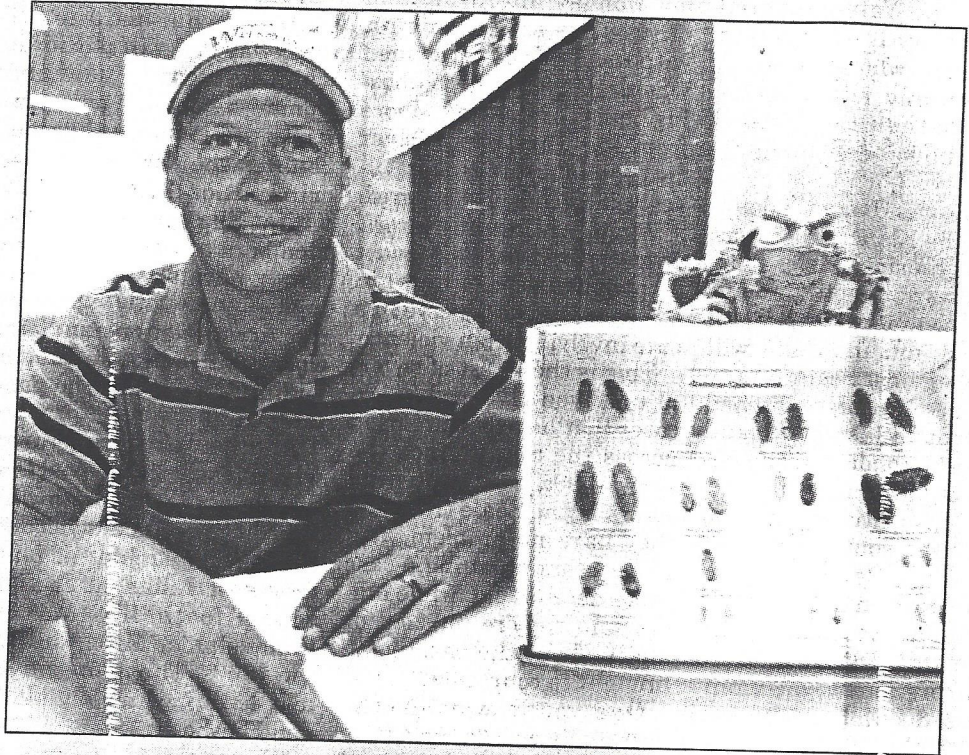

SEE: THE BREWERS "THE LONG JOURNEY" researched and compiled by Jack E. Brown (June 1988) for more detailed history of the Brewers from London to Virginia, Georgia, Louisiana and then to Pike County, Mississippi.

John and Elizabeth sold a slave in Washington Parish (record in St. Helena Parish) to Amacher: 1 negro slave named Emmanuel - about 26 years old - for the amount of $1500.00 - June 29, 1859.

Danny Brewer

Asked about his daily life, Danny Brewer said, "I work killing termites, I come home, I spend time with my son, I go mudding in my jeep and I play golf. That's about it." Brewer, a newly-wed has been an exterminator for six years. He fell into the work after applying for a job at Wilson's Termite Control. A native of Jackson, Brewer said the hardest work he has to do is crawling under someone's house to take out termites and termite damage. "It gets dirty," he said. Brewer enjoys his work and likes helping people with their problems and finding solutions to make their homes safer and his customers more comfortable.

Questions linger over release of incentives for DeSoto project

HERNANDO, Miss. (AP) — A June 1 deadline for developers to secure land and financing for the Riverbend Crossing project in DeSoto County has passed but there are questions whether requirements were met to qualify for $173 million in state incentives.

Officials with the Mississippi Development Authority were not saying Friday

"We've been moving ahead for six months hot and heavy. We're excited about continuing on. Our goal is to start construction within the next 45 to 60 days."

— Bill Phillips, Phillips Development president

"I've been told they're moving dirt," Mayo said Friday. "If they're moving dirt, I feel like that would satisfy the deadline the Legislature set."

The site is unpopulated, primarily planted in row crops, between U.S. 61 and the Mississippi river levee, just north of the Tunica County line.

Phillips said he spent the Pat-Thanks for the details. I thought my gg?pappy was being awfully free with my money when they started mentioning heirs and decedents.

I received some Lowry info in the mail today. It turns out the Henrietta Windham prnts were Robert Windham and ? Rhodes. I still interested in her supposedly Florida birth. Maybe her prnts were on a trip to Disneyland (Frontierland). They probably decided that the land around Orlando was worthless and returned to MS. My family has a great business sense my gftb Reynolds bought a Livery Stable in Sanford about the time Henry Ford came out with the Model-T. I forward the info to you early next week. - Robert in NJ

They had a son named George, b. Brunswick Co. I have no dates on any of the above. George had a son named Burrell, b. Brunswick Co. abt 1730, m. Elizabeth Patrick, d. abt 1799. George's son, William, b. Isle of Wight in 1758, m. Elizabeth Holden (or Holman). He served in the Revolutionary War and lived in Oglethorpe Co., GA at time of death abt 1820. Descendants of this Lt. Brewer 74

Dear Mr. Strickland,

I am researching my husband's Brewer side of the family. I am stuck at the point of Howell Brewer and wife. I have found two names, Patience Strickland and Patricia Muenger. This is the Howell Brewer that first came to Wayne County about 1798.

My husband's line came from Howell's son Drew, grandson Drew. Drew Sr. married Arcadia Walley. I would also like to know Drew Jr's 1st wife. Was she Polly Ann Mills? I got this name from family members, but I can't substantiate it. His 2nd wife was Maggie Palmer. All the children were by the 1st wife.

Can you help me?

Sincerely,
Juanita Smith

GENEALOGICAL TABLE

Brewer

NOTE: In this genealogical table and in this entire book, I have traced only your lineal ancestor. His or her brothers and sisters appear only for the purpose of assisting others who may be descended from these brothers and sisters.

I hope that this table may inspire many of your relatives to trace their ancestors back far enough to connect with some of these branches and that they will communicate to me the results of their researches.

Genealogy is an interesting and absorbing hobby with me and I shall be happy to correspond with all inquirers who remember the admonition that a self-addressed, stamped envelope must be enclosed. The dates of the generations are only approximate but may help to orient you.

The Author

Richard M. Johnson, son of George W. Brewer, b. ca. 1834; d. ca. 1913-15; m. Sarah Porter Lackey. (These are my niece's grandparents.)

There may have been other children.

Brewer 106

These Brewers lived on Big Butler Creek. There is an old Brewer Cemetery near the old Sweeney School. It would likely have stones and some Brewer data. It is down the road some distance (half-mile or so). Mrs. Nancy Brewer Hardwick and her husband Buckley Brewer are buried there in a "box" tomb--stones built up on top of the ground. Mr. Richard Brewer sold this farm (or his part of it) about 1892 and moved to Waynesboro, Tenn. when his son was about five years old. They sold to Mr. Phillips (had sons Finch, Wendell, Marvin and girls Bell, Fannie and Goldie Phillips. The writer boarded with Belle Phillips while teaching at the Sweeney School in 1923, on this farm.)

Sarah Porter Lackey was orphaned and went to live with her older sister Hannah Lackey Brewer, wife of Lewis Brewer. Also, it is thought Mary Lackey lived there, too. (See Census, 1850, Wayne Co., Tenn.) Lewis and Hannah were their guardians.

Richard M. Johnson Brewer's father died and he went to Lewis and Hannah Lackey Brewer's to live. They were his guardians also. (Story told by Sarah Porter Lackey to her daughter-in-law Wilton Morrow Brewer.)

The young people fell in love at a young age and married. Their guardians (sister and brother) were furious at them. She said they had a hard time the first year they were married, as they got no help from their guardians (their money tied up).

Richard M. Johnson Brewer, b. ca. 1843. Likely some of the Brewer family has the exact dates or it can be obtained from the Walnut Grove Cemetery where he and his wife are buried. All their children were born at Butler Creek. Mr. Brewer moved to a farm two miles east of Waynesboro when Snow was five years old.

Richard M. Johnson Brewer served in the Union Army and drew a pension as did his widow.

It is said the Lackeys came from Giles Co., Tenn. Mr. Wm. Lackey of Lawrence Co. had a daughter, Mary Snow Lackey. (note--Sarah Porter Lackey's son was named Snow.)

Richard M. Johnson Brewer and his wife had the following children: (all born in Wayne Co.

THE MAIN PUSH TO GET THIS TOGETHER AT THIS TIME IS (1) FOR PATRICIA N. MY WIFE IS GRANDDAUGHTER OF BENJAMIN PATTON HILTON (1869-1962), LOU ELLA PRESTIDGE (1881-1974), JOHN FRANKLIN BREWER (1856-1940) AND EURETHA SUPHRONA MERRITT (1862-1928) AND (3) TO GET IT ON COMPUTER FROM A MILLION (MORE OR LESS) PIECES OF PAPER, SOME NOT TOO EASILY READ.

BREWER - CATO - CROMWELL -JOHNS(T)ON - KILLINGSWORTH - LINDER - POWELL - STRIBLING - Sally Randol McGill, 2504 Brookwater Circle, Birmingham, AL 35243-4330 is trying to fill in gaps on the family tree for the given surnames. Most of the folks on the chart were early arrivals to Washington County, AL. There are conflicting stories about the origins of the JOHNSTONS. I have collected several of the theories, but tend to favor the one that they came to AL from St. Mary's City VA near Norfolk. SIR WILLIAM JOHNSTON b ca 1700 m HONOR KILLINGSWORTH b Ireland. William & Honor had 6 sons. Our line is from their son, JOHN JOHNSTON who married JOYCE POWELL. " A LIST OF REFUGEES TO EAST FL FROM GA : 7-18-1783" lists JOHN JOHNSTON, WILLIAM POWELL (Joyce's father; her mother was Elizabeth ?) & JOHN LINDER. William Johnston is not listed there. John & Joyce Powell Johns(t)on lived in Pensacola after they married and then, in 1795-7 they moved to McIntosh Bluff, Mississippi Territory (now Washington Co., AL) They had 6 sons and 3 daughters. I have information on their children. JOSEPH CALLOWAY/CALLAWAY JOHNSTON b.1791 McIntosh Bluff Washington Co., AL d. 7-3-1839 McIntosh Bluff is my husband's ancestor. Joseph m. CLARA CATO. I cannot find a record of their marriage.

Clara's parents were STERLING CATO & ABIGAIL BREWER. Clara is supposedly a descendant of OLIVER CROMWELL (?) Clara Cato & Joseph C. Johnston had 8 children. I have information on them. Our descendant is their son, POWELL BATES JOHNSTON b. 7-21-1827 McIntosh d. 4-10-1901 Washington Co., AL & ANN CORNELIA YONGE STRIBLING. I hope someone else is pinpointing the same lines (?)

History of the Brewer Families in Mississippi From Early 18th Century to Present

In 1798:

c. 1795 in 1830 Wayne

A man named Howell Brewer; his wife, Patricia Munger; and a bachelor brother named Elija Brewer came to Mississippi in the early eighteenth century. They left the Carolinas, one of the original Thirteen Colonies. His wife was riding a horse; the brother walking, carrying all their belongings on their backs. After several day's journey they arrived in Mississippi. There they encountered various tribes of Indians. On the east branch of the Chickasawhay River, a few miles south of where Waynesboro, Mississippi, now stands, they discovered a Fort built by other settlers for protection against the Indians. The Fort was near where Winchester, Mississippi, stands on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad. Soon after entering the Fort the wife gave birth to a baby boy. They stayed in the Fort for a month. Then they crossed the river on a ferry and continued their journey westward, settling in Southwest Wayne County near the Greene County border. There they settled down and built a log cabin and started raising a family. They had six boys and one girl.

Howell, the father, was accidentally shot trying to shoot a hawk that was catching his chicken. His bachelor brother, Elija, helped the widow raise the children. Years later Elija was attacked by a wild bobcat and the bobcat tore off one of Elija's ears. He died during the Civil War. Mrs. Pat James and Mrs. Monroe Sowell served as undertakers and buried him while the men were gone to war.

A number of years after this book was published, I discovered in 33, Harvard Classics at Page 214, the account of John Brewer as a co-adventurer on Drakes voyage around the world, serving as Drakes trumpeter and trusted companion, who participated with him in a battle with natives on the Isle of Mocha on the coast of South America, near the north of Chile and was wounded nearly a score of times. The account goes on to say that Thomas Brewer was killed and apparently eaten by the natives and that the whole party narrowly escaped death or capture by taking to their boat. Later, in London, I obtained a book, "The Life of Sir Francis Drake" by H. E. W. Mason, published in 1941 in London by Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd. of St. Pauls House, Warwick Square, E. C. 4 wherein John Brewer is said to have been recommended to Drake by his good friend, Sir Christopher Hatton, Secretary to Queen Elizabeth I.

John returned on the Golden Hind after a most adventurous voyage during which, in addition to the battle at Mocha, he was lost overboard in a storm and somehow, with great difficulty, recovered alive.

Returning to England, Drake anchored out in the bay at Plymouth and sent John Brewer as his messenger to Queen Elizabeth to tell her of the immense booty on the ship and to find how Elizabeth planned to receive him. She told John that Drake should lay low for a while till she could deal with the Spanish ambassador. After a time, she had Drake divide the loot and unload all but the shares of master and crew and turn the rest over to be deposited in the Tower of London.

No more appears of John in Masons story and I have never been able to discover more about him. When the Spanish Armada attacked England a few years later, many of Drakes co-adventurers were enlisted as superior seamen, commanding ships in the English navy, but the name of John Brewer does not appear. How this well-connected and highly capable adventurer failed to be included is still not known to me. Could he have been the son of Thomas Brewer and _____ Drake with a brother named Thomas who was killed by the savages at Mocha? Was he John, of Brewers Neck and earlier, "John Brewer Merchant and grocer of Bartholomew Lane" in London? It is certainly not unreasonable that we see the possibility that he was our kinsman.

CHAPTER XIII

Henry Brewer and Early Brewers

Henry Brewer was one of the oldest of the pioneers of the Valley and his name appears as a taxpayer of Ayr Township, Bedford County, Pennsylvania, in 1773, and Bethel Township, of that County, in 1774. He was the immediate neighbor of Henry Levering on the east and of Conrad Peck I, on the west and their families were close in friendship as well. He was born about 1715 in what is now Brunswick County, Virginia, on a plantation owned by his father, George Brewer. In his younger days he was a woodsman, "Long Hunter," trapper and Indian fighter and, tradition relates, was one of the "Long Riflemen" so feared by the French officers. His personal history is vague between the days of his youth in Virginia and the time when he came to Bedford County, but, in tradition, he came to Pennsylvania in the early 1760's with old Conrad Peck I, who had been his comrade in the Indian Wars, and, closely following the establishment of Fort Bedford, some forty miles to the northward, built his cabin, set up his family and grimly took up the task of wrestling a home from the new wilderness.

His family history goes back to the earliest Virginia settlement at Jamestown—even further, to London in the 1500's—and his family name is written on the immortal "Battle Abbey Roll" of Senlac or Hastings, identifying a trusted Lieutenant of William the Conqueror in the year 1066. (See Page 27.)

It was more than a hundred and fifty years before Old Henry Brewer laid his hearthstone in the Land of the Juniata, that John Brewer, a merchant and grocer of London, Bartholomew Lane, was writing his Will, naming his wife, Mary Grove, daughter of Ralph Grove of the Temple and of Canterbury, and his children, John, Roger and Margaret.

He likewise named his father, Thomas Brewer and his uncle Roger Drake of London, which shows that his mother's maiden name was Drake. His Will leaves the impression that he was a citizen of eminence and respectability in the City of London. In 1629-30, we see this same John Brewer since emigrated to Virginia, proprietor of two large estates Brewers Neck and a tract in Stanley Hundred in Warwick River, Virginia, Representative to the Virginia House of Burgesses, which met in the wooden church in Old James town, and already a man of power and influence in the new land.

That his mother's name was Drake suggests that she was a relative of the distinguished Sir Francis Drake of Spanish Armada fame. The Drakes were already firmly associated with the Americas for Sir Francis had made many voyages there to raid and plunder the Spanish Colonies and the trading ships of the Spanish Main. It was he who, in 1586, rescued the ill-fated Roanoke Colony—England's first attempt to settle the American shores—and who, in 1588 struck such a mighty blow for English Supremacy in the destruction of the Spanish Armada. He died on shipboard in 1595 and was buried at sea, as befits a naval hero.

Doubtless the adventurous traits of the Drakes contributed to John's pioneering instincts and sped him on his way to the New World. He possibly knew the bold Sir Francis personally, for he was a grown young man before 1595—may even have sailed on his ships—even may have touched the shores of America to raid and rob the Spaniards. He surely was Drake's great admirer, for did he not name his son Francis after that all-time Prince of Privateers? He was known as John Brewer of Brewers Neck. Just across the James River from Jamestown, he lived, raised his family and beamed at the timbers that were to become the framework of the Land of Freedom. He died in 1635 and his Will was filed in London, May 6, 1635, for there was no recognized probate court in Virginia.

His son, John Brewer II, was born in London and, while yet a youngster, sailed at his father's side, in one of the little wooden ships of those days, across the fearsome ocean, to share the toil and honor of founding the New Empire. Little did he know—and little his father knew—that the flickering spark they so prayerfully nurtured would, one day, shoot aloft and be the pillar of flame to lighten the World's people—to be the "Arsenal of Democracy"—the envy of all Nations—the Shrine of Freedom—the Hope of the World! He came to a bleak and cheerless wilderness where danger lurked in every bush and sudden death might flash from any tree. He might have known Pocahontas or Captain John Smith. He certainly became intimate with all of the leading men of his time for, in 1657-58 he was a member of the House of Burgesses, as his father had been, nearly thirty years before.

He married—we know not whom but her first name was Ann—and after his father died, lived on at Stanley Hundred where he raised his family and did his part to establish the principles we now call Democracy. He died in 1669, leaving a nuncupative Will wherein he gave his son, John Brewer III, "Stanley Hundred" and his son, Thomas, "The land whereon he lives," and named two daughters, Mary and Ann. He also left personal property, as shown by the inventory of his estate, including 87,621 lbs. of tobacco, 155 l. gold and silver money and 78 oz. of valuable plate.

John Brewer III may have lived on Stanley Hundred for a time, but he seems to have been living in what is now Brunswick County at the time of his death, whereas Stanley Hundred appears to lie fifty miles northeast of Brunswick. Virginia grew westward from the coast, toward the mountains—settlers slowly driving back the Indians and pushing their clearings up the rivers, further and further from the founding place. The district south of the James was first known as Nansmond County, out of the western portion of which, came Isle of Wight, then Southampton, Sussex, Greenville and Brunswick, in succession, to the westward, as settlement progressed. John III had lived through the trying days of the Civil War in England,—the Cromwell Protectorate,—the whims and prejudices of Parliament and a succession of weak and evil Colonial Governors who kept the settlement in constant uproar. He saw—and doubtless had a part in—Bacon's Rebellion, in 1676. Settlers, south of the James, were a bit more of the "Rugged Individual" type and less sympathetic toward the King. The utter wilderness was "just out back," from their perilous frontier and offered a ready haven for any "too outspoken" dissenter—so defiance of authority was, here, of a higher order.

We have no details of this sturdy ancestor's death, but Governor Berkeley's "Hanging List" does not contain his name. His departure for the West and the "outland" Brunswick County area was doubtless due to the Governor's neck-tie party.*

*Bacon was a patriot whose cause was lost—so history has branded him a "Rebel." A greedy monarch and a spiteful and child-like Governor spared no pains to heap calumnies and curses on his memory. The battle with the swamps and forests decided the issue in this first struggle for American Independence and this original true patriot died, a fugitive from The Tyrant, in some hidden retreat—a victim of malaria, dysentery and starvation. His comrades hid his body away in burial and where it lies, no man can say. The wicked Berkeley dug up the coffin, that he might hang the poor, wasted body in public disgrace, but it contained only stones and earth—and the Tyrant was denied his cruel orgy. He, nevertheless, pursued those others who had aided the patriot cause and his hangings and persecutions became so vicious that even the King expressed his disgust.

Bacon's two chief lieutenants were the particular objects of Berkeley's revenge and he was able, finally, to seize and hang Drummond, though Richard Lawrence and a few trusted followers seem to have escaped him. They fled towards the Roanoke, in snow and winter rain, and the Governor gave up the pursuit when some

When he died, he left no Will, though, apparently, he had some wealth, and the names of some of his children are uncertain. He was probably the first of the Brewers to "go West" from the original "Brewers Neck" country and, since the wilderness does not inspire writings or the keeping of records, some of his personal life is lost to us.

One of his sons was George—apparently a rugged and fearless man of the Frontier. George grew up in the Backwoods, stubbornly holding back the savages and watching civilization move up to his rude clearing. Prolific, he was, as well, and married Sarah Lanier, the daughter of John Lanier, a participant in Bacons Rebellion and a fugitive from Governor Berkeley and the King, and a relative of Sidney Lanier, the famous Southern poet. By her, he had ten children, William, Oliver, Henry, Nathaniel, Sarah, Lanier, George, Nicholas, John and Howell—then, when she died, married Alice _____ by whom he had several more children. He lived and in 1744, died, in Brunswick County, leaving his second wife, Alice, and the greatest host of progeny yet discovered in this genealogy.

George's children, though numerous, were by no means all of the Brewers in Brunswick County. A search of the deed records which I made, in 1947, disclosed 92 deeds between 1737 and 1853, bearing the Brewer name. There were William, John, Susan, Dorothy, Willie, Yearly, Lewis, Peter, Robert, Nicholas, Henry, James, Jesse, Lucy, Obedience, friendly Indians reported that the fugitives had been drowned while crossing a river—a story doubtless spread by the patriots themselves, for, in after years, the valleys and mountains of Brunswick County, towards which they had been fleeing, were populated by an amazing number of reputed "Rebels" and the county seat now bears the name of Lawrenceville. Rebels or not, this spot was literally bursting with Brewers for a century afterwards and the name is respected there to this day—all of which leads me to say that I like to think—in fact, I believe—that John Brewer III and his clan were their fugitive forbears and that we may claim, for our fathers, a share in this first blow for Liberty.

Horace, Lanier, George, Sylvanius, Oliver, Boyce and Thomas and many repetitions in the several generations of that period.

The county must have been largely populated by Brewers if we are to estimate them by their activity in real estate. Judging by the dates, the Brewers living there in the earlier 1700's would have been George (father of Henry), William, James, Horace, and Peter, probably brothers—and, doubtless, the progenitors of the host of others that appear later in the records.

John Brewer III (the Rebel of Bacons Rebellion) was their father and their neighbors would have been the Brownes, Highs, Butlers, Laniers, Williams, Linches, Colliers, Woodruffs, Fields, Hills and Walls—any number of whom may have been and probably were their brothers-in-law or sons-in-law. Berkeleys wrath had driven them all from their homes at Jamestown and having come to this backwoods area to escape him, they made common cause of their isolation, intermarried, conquered the wilderness and the Indians and reared new generations of Rebels whose Revolution, a century later, achieved the American Independence dimly glimpsed by the heroic Bacon.

George was a Mason and left a Masonic Will, naming all of his first family and some of his second. To Henry Brewer, our backwoods ancestor, he gave "all that tract of land between Fountains Creek and Rattlesnake Creek, a young horse we call Patrick and a gun."

In 1947, with my son, Charles, I made a journey to Rattlesnake Creek to see the kind of land these old fathers of ours had lived on and to touch with my hands the earth their crude tools had cultivated so long ago. I doubted if I could find it but was agreeably surprised to find a number of elders in the vicinity who knew of the "Old Brewer lands,"—of Rattlesnake Creek,—even of the old Brewer Family ceme-

The Forty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry was organized in Mount Vernon, Ohio, on February 2nd, 1862 and left, on the 21st, for the front, in command of J. L. Kirby Smith, a nephew of the Confederate General, Kirby Smith. It was assigned to the Ohio Brigade, composed of the Twenty-seventh, Thirty-ninth, Forty-third and Sixty-third Regiments, First Division, Army of The Mississippi, which participated in the battles of New Madrid, Island No. 10, Tiptonville, Fort Pillow and Corinth.

Quoting a War Chronicle of the time, concerning the Battle of Corinth, "The casualties among the men were very severe. In a few moments of fighting, over one-fourth of those engaged of the Forty-third were either killed or wounded."

Later, the Regiment participated in Grant's assault on Oxford, Mississippi, and in the campaign against Forrest in West Tennessee, and made the march with General Sherman from Memphis, by successive stages, to Atlanta and to the sea. In all of these fights, the Forty-third fully maintained its reputation.

After the close of the war, the Regiment went to Washington and participated in the Grand Review, and later, on

Then, back home again and baby Frank, 1863, and Henry Lloyd, 1864, and Addie, 1869. Then a lingering fever——

a frenzy of grief and Mary, the first born, was gone. Dust to dust, etc., but the living must be fed and toil would quench their tears. The little brood grew up, strong and hearty, with schools and churches to minister to minds and hearts and Dent and Sarah, with steadfast love, industry and piety to mold their characters. Their buildings built, the ditches, deep and long, complete, and broad acres bringing forth grain and fruit, they felt their battle won, when, alas, again the circle was broken. Frank, sweet and dreamy youth of twenty-two, the westerling urge of the pioneering clan in his heart, must needs take up the trail again. The new railroad —the path to the Shining Mountains and the Blue Pacific—claimed him and, far away in Colorado, building the Union Pacific, fever took his life. Dent sorrowfully brought his body home to lie beside little Mary, on the banks of Owl Creek and life went on again—but not so gay and carefree—the vacant chair kept reminding them.

All the children were married and gone by 1890 and Dent and Sarah were alone again. By 1900, rheumatism and a complication of heart ailments, blanned by him on his arduous service in the War, made the old veteran sell his farm. So they moved to Williamsport to live in a house, across the road from the one Dent and Jonathan had bought for their mother, so long ago. Life was serene and restful here, with their children around them, within Sunday visiting distance, new grandchildren accumulating and all the friends of their lifetime assembling on Main Street, Saturdays, so they settled down to enjoy it.

But not for long. Three years later, in 1903, a sudden heart attack ended Sarah's vacation, so they laid her away in Rivercliff Cemetery, at Mount Gilead, and Dent was alone. His rheumatism plagued him and from time to time he lived with Addie, Joanna or Lloyd, but mostly he "bached it" in his own house, where, as he said, he could "keep out of other folks way." Genial, cheerful and full of intelligent conversation about the days of long ago, he shared his aches and pains with no one and his visits were ever welcome. And then, one Sunday, in 1914, "ah, dang!", he "couldn't make it!" and, before the week was over, the Old Soldier was resting, beside his mate, in Rivercliff. A motor hearse completed the journey, begun so long ago by ox team on Sidelinghill Mountain, and the stubborn soil had claimed his dust at last.

The tide of emigration that had carried him so painfully across the Alleghenies had dropped him and swept on, across the Mississippi, the Great Plains, the Shining Mountains and the Thirsty Deserts, and now ebbed on the shores of the Mighty Pacific. A nation, barely born, had grown to full maturity before his eyes while he, busy with the cares of childhood, fatherhood and old age, had scarcely known it.

his mother, lived—and too, he was a mite stingy by nature—so Mira became dissatisfied.

When she was twenty-eight, her father having given her a farm of 110 acres at South Millers Corners, one and one-half miles south of town, she and her brother, Chester, (he twenty-one) decided to move on it and be farmers. So, farm they did, with vim and vigor—she often said she was never happier in her life—and Jim, in the buggy with the yellow wheels, paid court as ever, with never a word of marrying.

But, across the road, on the creek bank, in the winter of 1889, a sawmill was being "set." And ever on the job, bossing the men, yelling at the horses, doing "two mens work," was a stocky, rough and ready young man, with clear blue eyes, and nimble feet, who owned a half interest in the mill. Chester, a curious spectator, scraped acquaintance with him and found he was Lloyd Brewer from "up on the Prairie" by Williamsport, four miles away. A friendship grew into an invitation to the house, where our heroine was introduced to the "Sawmill Man" and something clicked. A deal was made for Mira to board the mill crew and she saw our hero, morning, noon and night. The competition was too strong for Jim, but he held on, through the spring, summer and fall, fighting a losing battle for the lady's love, till Christmas, 1890, when Lloyd and Mira quietly slipped away to the parsonage, and in a moment the parson had tied the knot. Jim was terribly "miffed," at being so rudely "cut out" and, for years, avoided contact with the happy couple, though he later became reconciled and they all became good friends and neighbors again.

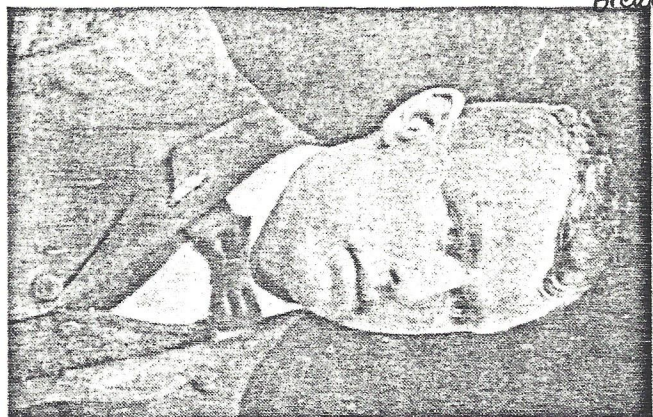

CHAPTER XXI

Lloyd Brewer and Elmira Levering

Lloyd, as noted before, had been born in 1864, on Dent's farm, a mile north of Williamsport, and grew up there. As a little boy he did chores around the house, helped his mother, went to school at a one room schoolhouse and to Sunday School and Church at the old United Brethren Church, still standing in Williamsport, and, once in a while, sat with Dent on the wagon seat and drove the horses. A rugged little fellow, he was, and early disposed to fight any boy of any size, but at home all was peace. His older brother, Frank, was his beloved idol and they played and worked together as few brothers have ever done. Their devotion to one another was the talk of the neighborhood and the pride and joy of their parents. Years afterward, Dent would say, "Never did I see two boys so attached to each other."

When Lloyd was about thirteen, a shanty Irishman, named Dan Sheehan, came to the farm as a hired ditcher and brought a battered old fiddle on which he saved out jigs and reels and sentimental tunes of the Irish. The boy was completely captivated and begged his father for a fiddle. He played on Dan's old wreck whenever he could, but his mother, frantic at the screeching, drove him out of the house, so he went to the barn to work at it. When there was a hard job to do he would offer to do it if he could have a fiddle. Finally Dent, moved by constant pleading, told him he should have one if he could learn to play "Old Zip Coon." Work and play were now forgot and nights and days were as one. Dan lent his best efforts as teacher and after a hectic month or two, proclaimed, one evening, that his proud pupil could meet the test. It was already dark and snowing, but Dent hitched up the horses and, with Dan alongside, to pick out the instrument, they went to town and, in Mark Cook's store, bought one for $7.00, complete with "fiddle-box, rosin and bow" that served the boy for fifty years and with which he came to be the recognized and official "square dance fiddler" of the community.

The years went by and Lloyd grew up, working on the home place, hiring out to others at farming, threshing, clearing, ditching, cutting timber, sawing lumber and building buildings. A top hat he had, with stock tie and Prince Albert, and, with his testament under his arm, went regularly to church and prayer meeting. His sister, Addie, said in 1945, "Lloyd was proud and stylish, wore the best clothes and always went to church. He was a favorite with the local girls and always had his choice of the best of them. He had a good horse and rig and was always welcome in the best families."

He finally bought a half interest in a sawmill and it was while operating it, at South Millers Corners, that he met Elmira. After their marriage, he farmed a little, but he loved machinery and often worked on threshing machines, sawmills, etc. A few years later he bought a shingle mill of the portable type and was often away from home, running it. He got $1.50 a thousand for sawing shingles and the farmer furnished the lumber, properly sawed in blocks, at the mill. All the while he farmed a bit, raised stock, cut wood, built fences and otherwise kept up the farm. He built a large, new barn on the farm in 1900, and in 1909, a very large new house. The lumber for both was felled and saved on the farm and, where necessary, was hauled four miles to be milled. It was entirely weather-seasoned for there was no kiln available.

His great interest in mechanical things led him to buy the first Columbia Chain Drive bicycle in the neighborhood and, while automobiles were yet quite in their infancy, he bought a 1902 model Oldsmobile with the little curved dashboard and the radiator and motor both beneath the floor. It had no steering wheel, but was steered with a lever and was cranked by a crank at the side. It was a one cylinder job and would run about twenty miles an hour on the level, but generally had to be pushed up anything steeper than a medium grade. It was the cause of much joking among the neighbors and probably some envy. Though most everyone was amused when it got stuck on a hill or in the mud, I am sure that they all liked to ride in it and would have liked to have one themselves.

Lloyd became fast friends with Chester Levering, who seemed to fill the gap left when his brother, Frank, died, and throughout the nearly forty years of their association, I never heard a harsh word pass between them. Unlike as they were, Chester so calm and Lloyd so explosive, they loved and appreciated one another as have few men I have known.

He had an inquiring mind and loved to learn things and explore new fields. As early as 1893, he attended the World's Fair at Chicago and later, the World's Fairs at Buffalo, in 1900 and St. Louis, in 1904. He always went alone and came home full of stories and accounts of what he had seen. It made him very popular at the country stores and other gathering places and many and wonderful were the tales he told.

Henry Lloyd Brewer at about twenty-one years.

"Lloyd was proud and stylish, wore the best clothes and always went to church."

Lloyd loved dogs and was known as one of the best and most constant hunters in the community. He always kept bounds of one kind or another, mostly of the fox and coon variety. In company with Floren Mann, Cor Wagner and others, he would follow the fox hounds from night-fall to day-break, getting no further action out of it than listening to the dogs and, by the sound of the barking, telling whose dog was ahead and whose had lost the trail. He never killed a fox and did all he could to keep others from killing any. I remember once when I was about ten years old, we went to a Fourth of July celebration at Chesterville. One of the farmers, in some manner, had caught a fox unharmed and had him in a chicken crate on exhibit at the celebration. He said he kept him in a corn crib at home. My father stayed until after dark and the farmer took the fox home, then he bought a brace and a one inch bit and when we came to the farmer's house on our way home, he got out of the buggy and crept through the farm yard to the corn crib and very silently bored enough holes through the side to detach one slat, then he left the hole open and came back to the buggy, expressing the greatest satisfaction that the fox would find the hole and be gone in the morning.

Each year, practically up to the time of his death, he went with a group of sportsmen to the Walhonding River, some forty miles east, where they would live in tents for a week or so and hunt fox, fish and drink beer.

Lloyd loved good horses and always had a buggy horse that could pass anything else in the country. These horses were generally wild and unreliable and every few months would run off and tear up the buggy. Knowing their instability, he ordinarily bought only old buggies, or, as he called them, "road wagons." Mother always owned a safer horse and good buggy, which she never allowed him to drive.

He loved turtle soup and fried turtles and, with Uncle Chester, would forage in the swamps and along the streams, hunting for them. I have known them to bring in twelve or fifteen turtles from a single hunt. He loved to hunt and shoot quail and rabbits. He generally went by himself or with Uncle Chester, but, once each year, he invited all the Lutheran preachers in the Mansfield Circuit to come and hunt with him. It made a great party, for they all came. Mother always cooked a tremendous dinner and a tremendous supper for them. He loved to talk and argue with the preachers about their religious theories. Though he was not a very religious man from a church standpoint, he always maintained strict honesty in his dealings and was the first to denounce people who were shady in business. He despised hypocrites and sham Christians. He often sang or hummed church hymns while working or thinking and would never tolerate any ridicule of religion or religious faith.

He disliked funerals, but always went, as he said, to "show respect."

He was a fast believer in the Democratic party and government and actually made discrimination, in some cases, in his associates because their political beliefs were otherwise. He liked to study old and new things and talked with the oldest people in the community. As a result, he was an excellent local historian and, had this history been commenced in his life time, it would have contained a great many things that cannot now be had.

He loved cock fights and, after good automobiles and roads were built, would drive great distances, sometimes a hundred miles, to a meet. They were unlawful and, from time to time, the law would step in and some minor punishment would be inflicted, but he continued to attend them and, in later years, actually raised and owned some fighting cocks, himself.

While he probably never attended school beyond the fifth or sixth grade, he was a great respecter of education and culture and knew how to talk to educated and refined people.

Few men were better posted on the affairs of government and economics and, though he never accumulated any great amount of money, it was his proud boast that he never owed any one or used money for foolishness when it was needed for necessities.

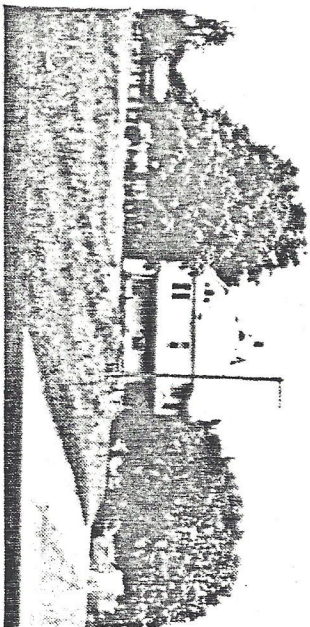

He loved his drinks and sometimes drank more than was good for him. He made hard cider and generally had some on hand. A keg of beer and a few good companions, in the barn or the nearby woods, was the delight of his heart and many were the times he had it. Until 1910, there was a licensed distillery, two miles east, on a small stream called Lost Run, where Lost Run Rye Whiskey was made, aged, bonded and sold, by the bottle, jug or barrel, for $2.35 a gallon, F.O.B. the spigot. A goodly lot he bought of it in his younger days—yea, and drank, too, though he was generous with it and his drinking companions consumed a substantial part.

There seemed to be a mutual understanding between him and Mira in these matters of drinking; and, while she drank nothing herself, she seemed to feel that, if he enjoyed such pleasures, it was his right to indulge. Not even when he "got too much" did she upbraid him, but generally met him at the door or even helped him put his horse away and, without faultfinding or complaint, plied him with food or black coffee as seemed best, till he was ready for bed.

They both loved company and were "good visitors" wherever they went, but mostly, they liked to "have company" at home and it mattered little who came, the welcome mat was out. Benighted travelers, without credentials or assuring appearance, were cheerfully admitted and furnished the best the house afforded. The parlor bedroom was ever ready for any wandering pack peddler, drummer, avowed tramp or any nondescript that happened along and payment was neither required nor accepted. Tramps, black or white, who would come to the door and ask permission to sleep in the barn, always ended up in the "parlor bedroom" and had breakfast with the family in the morning, before resuming their travels. Mother would say, "We ought to treat everyone as if they were somebody. Maybe they were, once." Where this custom of turning no one from their door originated, I never knew, but no one else in the neighborhood ever sheltered wayfarers and it was generally predicted by everyone that some day we'd be "robbed and murdered." They had a keen respect for learning and education and woe to their child ~~who~~ had "trouble with the teacher," for he found he had plenty more at home when the news got there, and no matter if he was—or thought he was—right or wrong, he got a whipping that more than matched the one the teacher had given him. They always said, "We can't leave our children much when we go, but if they'll take it, we'll give them the best of education." I can still see my father beating on the table and bellowing, "Knowledge is Power!", when any poor miscreant of his children seemed to be weakening in the battle for some of that power. With so many varied things to do, and all of the woods, fields and creeks to explore, it was seldom the whole family was together, except at meal time, so he generally utilized that period to expound his philosophies and deliver his orations and ultimatums. Mother generally sat quiet during these times and, except for a few occasions when she feared for the safety of the crockery we called china, never remonstrated when he emphasized his sentiments with two-handed beatings on the table as he generally did. Sometimes she even added her bit which rarely consisted of more than, "Now you hear what Papa says." She never whipped or tried to chastise us in any way, but always threatened to "tell Papa" on us and that generally had the desired effect, for Papa had a habit of laying the gad on us, based on her report, without listening to our side of it.

She had "her money," gleaned from the cows, chickens, turkeys and fruit, and he had his, from heavier farm stuff and the sheep and horses and from his earnings at such extra-farm activities as he carried on. When we needed money for schooling, it was furnished, now by one and then by the other, but, I think, mostly by Mother. He paid the taxes, which, they agreed, evened up her owing the farm. Perhaps, at times, they had disagreements between them, but I can truthfully say that I never heard a real quarrel or threat of one.

In the summer of 1927, he complained that he was "not feeling well," though not much was thought or done about it. In September, he became ill enough to be confined to bed where he contracted pneumonia and in a few days passed away. During his last few hours, when he suspected his end was near, he talked cheerfully of his life and once said, "Well I may as well be going. My work is done and I have lived as I would again, if I could. The children are all raised and doing for themselves, better than I could do for them. There is enough saved to take care of your mother and I would rather die now than be sick for a long time and be a burden and use up your mother's living. I don't want any flowers or singing at the funeral. Just have them read,

Sunset and Evening Star
And one clear call to me;
Let there be no moaning at the bar
When I put out to Sea."

His wishes were carried out. Friends, rich and poor, assembled from miles around. It was the largest funeral I ever knew of in the vicinity and was, itself, convincing evidence of the breadth and fullness of the life he lived.

Mother lived on, in shocked aloneness, with the thousand mementos of those happier days all around her, till, in 1938, withered and shrunken like the last leaf in autumn, she drifted away to join the friends and companions of her youth. Down the paved highway that now has replaced the winding, yellow, dirt road of her childhood, they bore her, to rest in the now spacious Owl Creek Cemetery, by the side of all those others she had known and loved so well. The house by the side of the road, where, so long, they loved to live and be friends of man, is peopled by strangers now, and the scenes they knew so well now know them no more. Giant couriers of the air now pierce the skies above them and the thundering wheels of progress, with new and bewildering philosophies, have all but obliterated the bygone era they thought could never pass away.

CHAPTER XXX

Conclusion

Brewer 63

And so I come to the end,—for of succeeding generations it is for others to write. It was difficult, as you have seen, for me to write of myself and those of you who are about me. Too much is all around me—to much that presses on me as important that is not—and I fall to biography and to writing of things I love and thoughts I have or have had, and forget that these things, so near and dear to me, can but bore you, whose hearts are wrapped in thoughts and things of your own.

It is my fervent hope that this little story has inspired you to love and respect your Ancestors as they, in their honest and simple way, have doggedly clung to what, I feel proud to say, is the American Philosophy and the American Way of Life. I hope you have become proud of them too, since you know what they have done and how little they had to do it with. How these earnest, often unlettered people, with the vision of our Mighty Republic seen dimly through the mists, have built this Nation, stone by stone, clearing by clearing, state by state, without subsidy, relief, planned economy, collective bargaining or communistic dogma. How they braved the wilderness, the swamps and the deserts and blazed the trails, from the shores of the Atlantic to the sands of the Pacific—How they founded the Churches, the Schools and the Colleges—How they built the towns and cities and linked the coasts with iron rails of commerce—all by individual enterprise and in open, Christian competition.

What posterity will write of me and you, I know not, but I care, sincerely and deeply, that it shall be, that, in our struggles, wrong or right, we deviated not from the path these honest forbears set for us and that the world is better and their vision nearer fulfillment because we lived.

THE END

Bibliography

The sources from which I gleaned material for this work were many and varied. Few, however, were books by other authors, and these were used, mostly, to support findings I had made independently, from wills, deeds, patents, partitions, probates, marriage records, and military and census records. Hennings Statutes, William and Mary Quarterly, Virginia Quarterly Review, "The Levering Family" by Col. John Brewer, "17th Century Isle of Wight Co. Va." by Boddy and "Seldens of Virginia" by Kennedy were among the useful sources. Various genealogical works—the "Compendium of American Genealogy," and others, were of assistance. Doctor Swen assisted me most courteously in the library of the College of William and Mary. Helpful correspondents, all over the United States, supplied me with details and clues to seek further truths. Vague and filmy bits of tradition have inspired me to seek out unassailable facts—and I am forced to admit that this work has made me more respectful of tradition than I ever thought I could be.

For the deductions I have made from all this material, I make no apology. Perhaps, at times, I have erred. I have tried to avoid founding one deduction on another and, when I did so, I did not conceal it, but left it for your concurrence or rejection. Traces of people, long dead, are often hard to find and the reader may well be thankful that I have been able to bridge all the gaps. Photographs were mostly old, but the results were better than I anticipated. The little drawings at the chapter endings are my own. They are my characterizations of the persons to whom the chapters relate and, crude as they are, I like to think they are expressive and forceful.

The Brewer Family

The Brewer family has a long history. Of course, all families have a long history, but tracing those histories is the problem. The Brewer family is traceable back to at least the year 1066 and if one went back in to the Flemish areas of Europe, Holland and Belgium, one might trace them even farther though the many, many devastating wars in those areas makes the task very difficult indeed. The writer had the opportunity to visit the Genealogical Library at Salt Lake City, Utah. We found there the name BREWER dating back into the fifteen hundreds, besides the other spellings, such as B-r-u-e-r in England and Holland, as well as a few other spellings.

Most genealogists agree the name originated in the "low countries" and the Flemish area (Flanders) of France. They have traced those who came with William the Conqueror to England in 1066. At that time Drogo Bruiere appeared on the scene in England. It is likely that he and his family were active in the affairs of Flanders. His name appears on the Battle Abbey Roll in England. Drogo's wife was a cousin of the Conqueror who regarded him highly for as it is shown by the Conqueror's Survey, Drogo Bruiere (Brewer) was given vast estates which were taken from the English settlers and handed over to William the Conqueror's followers. It is shown that he received control of over 40 estates, one of which was Holderness, Bytham in Lincolnshire, and others. He built the Castle of Skipsey on Holderness. Drogo himself fell into bad repute with William the Conqueror and seeing he was in trouble, he made his escape back to Flanders. This seems to have happened about 1086. Drogo Bruiere's estates were confiscated even though Drogo's family remained in England and grew up there.

Soon after this, William the Conqueror left England and went back to Normandy for good. We heard no more about Drogo Bruiere (Bonniere or de la Bouverer). (This information comes from "The Battle Abbey Roll" by the Duchess of Cleveland, Vol. I, p. 183-4.)

Drogo Bruiere's children were left behind as they were now adults. It is from these that the Brewer families were descended. They became prominent as lawyers, soldiers, court advisors, and gentlemen with estates. There was Baron William Brewer who was an advisor to Henry III of England, who was advised to sign the Magna Carta in 1215.

Brewers
The Brewers continued to be active in government, but of course there were many who followed other lines of endeavor. They scattered to various parts of England and into Scotland and Ireland following various trades and professions. They were powerful in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries and on later.

We find them at a very early date in America in Virginia. Brewers were there at such an early date that they could have known John Smith of the Jamestown Settlement in 1607, for within twenty years of that date John Brewer, a London merchant, was a partner in the venture. We do know he had arrived in Jamestown in time to build himself up to where he was elected to the House of Burgesses in 1629-39, when they met at the old wooden church at Jamestown. (We recall that Jamestown had the first free general assembly in 1619.)

John Brewer brought a wife and three children to the New World and two more were born in Virginia. John's father was Thomas Brewer. Two of the children, Francis and Mary, died before he did. He owned "Brewer's Neck" and "Stanley Hundred", two big estates across from Jamestown, in the Warwick River District. John died before his father, as he mentions Thomas in his will.

Nicholas Brewer was exiled to the Barbados where he died in 1778. (There was a Nicholas Brewer in Wayne Co. and Lawrence Co., Tenn. at a very early date.) In the research at Salt Lake City, we found the name Cornelius Brewer all the way back to the mid-fifteen hundreds in Holland and in various counties in England. Also many generations contained the girl's name "Cornelia". So it is not surprising to find my great grandfather, Cornelius Brewer, in Wayne Co., Tenn!

In studying the Brewer family we found them scattering all over the United States with the Westward movement. Some moved to Pennsylvania and then westward; some moved down into North Carolina then to South Carolina and Georgia; back up into Tenn.; then back to North Carolina.; then to Kentucky and to Illinois and Indiana, westward to Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas and on and on as the new lands opened up. With large families of huge, strong sons it was little trouble to settle a place, clear and improve it, sell it and go on to new forest lands. Brunswick County, Virginia, had a goodly settlement of Brewers.

Before we start on the Brewers of Wayne and Lawrence Counties, let us go back to the later Brewers about 1600 in England.

William and Deanes' Baker Brewer:

Chard is the most southerly of the country towns of Somerset. There in the parish church of "Saint Mary the Virgin" which was built about 1296 is a mural honoring William Brewer and his wife Deanes. The inscription below the mural reads:

"Hereby lieth interred (expecting their Savior) the bodye of William Brewer of Chard Phisitian & Deanes his wife, who living 40 years in happie wedlock, in a full age departed this life shee dying 8 November 1614 and hee 24 July 1618 havinge issue only six sons & five daughters all men & women growne & all comforts to them."

The mural was probably contributed by the Brewer children about 1619, after the death of William, who died in 1618.

"History of Isle of Wight County, Virginia" by J. B. Boddie, 1938, pages 403-408, has a similar reference. Boddie goes on to say, "The pedigree in the 'Visitation of London' was signed by John Brewer, son of the above William and the following children of William Brewer of Chard are shown:

1. Peter Brewer, son and heir; children: Peter, Jr. and Mary (with parents marrying in 1574, Peter, Sr. must have been born ca. 1575)
2. William Brewer; married 1 May 1595 at All Hallows, Lombard St., to Mary Burrish, daughter of Edward Burrish (or Burwash) and Anne Clarkwood (or Chartwood.) William is listed as a citizen and grocer. He died in 1609; children: Anne, Edward, and William. In 1611 Mary Brewer married Peter Tower. She died in 1630.
3. Thomas Brewer; married _____ Drake and had children Thomas and John.
4. Christopher Brewer
5. John Brewer, citizen and grocer, Bartholomew Lane, London. ("Pedigrees of London Citizens" F. Lond pt. 35 (14215) #9146 1625-1675, says John's father was William Brewer, physician of Chard, Somerset; his mother was Deanes Baker of Crewkerne; his wife Mary Grove, daughter of Ralf Grove. John and Mary married in 1594 at Finchley; will 1675 PCC folio 56 showed children to have been John, Francis and Mary. Mary married Christopher Boun.
6. - 11. No record of these children.

Thomas Brewer, who married a Drake, was the father of John Brewer of London and Virginia, and outlived him for in his will he mentions, "To my dearly beloved father, Thomas Brewer, eight pounds yearly and every year so long as he shall happen to live after my decease, payable quarterly."

The children of John Brewer and Mary Drake, who were married at St. Verderot on 12 Feb. 1615, were:

1. Anne Brewer, bapt. 16 Dec. 1616
2. John Brewer, bapt. 11 Apr. 1619
3. Mary Brewer, bapt. 15 Feb. 1620
4. William Brewer, bapt. 3 Mar. 1621
5. Margaret Brewer, bapt. 30 Mar. 1623
6. Roger Brewer, no data.

The will of John Brewer mentions father, Thomas Brewer; sons, John and Roger Brewer; daughter, Margaret Brewer; brother, Thomas Brewer and mentions his children. The will was dated 4 Sept. 1631; probated in London in 1636 after John had died in Virginia in 1635. Before the case was completed, Mary, the wife, was "Mary Butler, having married the Rev. Thomas Butler in Virginia. (Note: Butlers in 1818 moved into Wayne Co., Tenn. with the Brewers.)

In 1622, a petition to the king, signed by John Brewer and others.

From "Minutes of Council and General Court of Colonial Virginia" by McIlwaine:

"Quarter Court 20th daie of January Ano Dmi 1628-- at this court Thomas Flint and Mary his wife did personally come into this court and surrender all their estate right title and interest in 1,000 acres of land situated in Stanley Hundred with the land patents and all the benefits and advantages that may accrew thereby unto John Brewer, Merchant."

"In 1629 John Brewer was fined for not giving four days work to the Church."

From other sources:

John Brewer was a Burgess from Warwick Virginia in 1629-30. He was a member of the Governor's Council, 1632-1634.

John Brewer II, baptised 11 Apr. 1619; died in Isle of Wight County, Virginia in 1669, leaving a noncupative (oral) will to which Ann, his relict, was executrix. Margaret Skyner aged 46 swore that John Brewer, her brother, did say that his estate was to be divided between his wife and sons, John Brewer and Thomas Brewer, 9 June, 1669." (Va. Wills & Administrations, 1647-1800 by Blanche Chapman Book I, p. 20 and p. 68.)

There are various references to his widow, Ann, having married second Anthony Halliday (or various spellings) the first in 1671 in Isle of Wight Co., Va. John Brewer II was a member of the House of Burgesses, 1657-58.

John Brewer III; no positive data for this John Brewer with his father being baptized in 1619 and married about 1640 (if at 21 years of age) John would have been born about 1641 and in Isle of Wight Co., Va., where he probably died about 1709-10.

George Brewer was born ca. 1680 in Isle of Wight Co., Virginia. He married probably in Surry County about 1705 to Sarah Lanier, b. ca. 1686, the daughter of John Lanier and 2nd wife (or 3rd) Mrs. Sarah Edmunds, widow of William Edmunds. George Brewer died in Brunswick County leaving a will written 12 July 1744 and proved 2 August 1744 in Brunswick Court by Alice Brewer, wife and Howell Brewer, son, the executors. It named the following:

William Brewer, son; land where he dwelleth
Oliver Brewer, son; land whereon I now dwell and a gun
Henry Brewer, son; land between Fountain & Rattlesnake Creeks, horse "Patrick", and gun.

Nathanial Brewer, son; 250 A. on both sides of Roanoke Rd.
Sarah Vick, dau.; 150 A. on both sides of Roanoke Rd.

Lanier Brewer, son; a young steer
George Brewer, son; a young steer
Nicholas Brewer, son; a cow and calf

John Brewer, son; a cow and calf
Howell Brewer, son; a young horse, "Snip", and feathers to make him a bed.

Alice Brewer, wife; the estate whereon we now dwell, the household goods and stock within the doors and without doors for the maintenance of all my younger children that it hath pleased God to give me by her during her life or until she marries again.

(Will Book 2, p. 91, Brunswick Co., Va.

Howell Brewer, son of George Brewer, is first shown in Brunswick Co., Va. records in 1743; after settling his father's estate, along with his stepmother, Alice Brewer in 1744, he is not found in Brunswick Co. records except once when he witnessed a deed by Oliver and John Brewer, both of North Carolina at the time, and one infers that he was also. The deed was dated 1763.

Howell Brewer first appears in North Carolina deeds when he received land grants in 1749 and again in 1754. In 1767 Howell Brewer sold land in Cumberland and Orange Counties, and in 1769 he and wife Marian sold land in Orange County.

Isaac Brewer, in his pension application, swore he was a son of Howell Brewer and said that Howell had married a second time and died in Western Tennessee with another wife and family. Isaac specifically named George Brewer as a much younger brother and Simon Brewer, then of Coosa Co., Ala. and aged 75 in 1853, deposed that he was a brother of Isaac. Isaac Brewer gave the meanderings of his father, Howell Brewer during Isaac's childhood years, and they allow of children being born to him and Marian in several places and states.

Henry Brewer, son of George Brewer, in a will written Sept. 2, 1788 and proved in Feb. Court 1779 at Pittsboro, Chatham Co., N.C. named: wife, Mary; sons, George, Henry Hubbard, Isaac, Oliver; daughters, An (sic) Parker, Mary Brewer, Sarah Brewer, Mandy Rebecca Brewer, Frances Brewer, and Allison Brewer.; Executor, George Brewer, son; witnesses, James M. Smith, Moses M. Smith, Homer H. Brewer.

Oliver Brewer, in his will (Will Book B., p. 45-46, 1792) named:

Rebecca Brewer, wife; George Brewer, son; Oliver Brewer, son; William Brewer, son; Henry Brewer, son; Christopher Brewer, son; Edward Brewer, son (married Ruth Strickland); Frances Brewer, daughter; Rebecca Edwards, dau. According to his pension Application she married William Edwards July 25, 1775 in Chatham Co., N. C. She was aged 77 in 1837, and when William was pensioned in 1832 they were in Robertson Co., Tenn.); Hanna Edwards, daughter.

Proof that Henry Brewer and Oliver were brothers was found in Edward Brewer's Revolutionary War pension application in which he stated that he "enlisted at Uncle Henry Brewer's old place." Also, there is a deed (Book K, p. 365) in Chatham Co., N. C. in which it stated that Henry Brewer willed a certain peice of land to his son, Hubbard Brewer, who sold it to his cousin, Edward Brewer.

Nicholas Brewer: (Deed Book 10, p. 4, Brunswick Co., Va.) Deed dated 21 June 1770, Nicholas Brewer and Sarah; his wife, of Meherrin Parish, Brunswick Co., "for love and affection they bear their said son Nicholas Brewer, Jr., for sum of five shillings for 160 acres." Nicholas and Sarah both made their mark and witnesses were Charles Powell, William Brewer and Benjamin Brewer. Ibid, p. 8 date 21 July 1770 Nicholas Brewer and Sarah, his wife deed to their son William Brewer 200 acres for the sum of five shillings with marks by Nicholas and Sarah Brewer and witnessed by Charles Powell, Thomas Brewer and Nicholas Brewer, Jr.

In other transactions, it appears that Benjamin and Thomas are also sons of Nicholas and Sarah Brewer.

William Brewer: (Deed Book 11, p. 80, 6 May 1773) "William Brewer and Ann, his wife, to James Wall, 200 pounds for 400 acres in Meherrin Parish, Brunswick Co., Va., reserving the graveyard where said William's father and mother are buried, being land whereon said William Brewer now lives and devised to him by his father, George Brewer.

Lanier Brewer is found in Brunswick Co. records only twice. He is mentioned in his father's 1744 will and he and Joanna Brewer, his wife sold 200 A. patented by Lanier 20 Aug. 1748 to Charles Collier 23 June 1740 (Deed Book 4, p. 163) and when they sold 250 A. to Richard Woodruff, the land Lanier had patented in 1748 and 1749 on May 26, 1752

It is inferred that Lanier and Joanna Brewer left Brunswick in the 1750s, possibly for the area of Bedford and Grayson Counties, Va., as there is a Brewer family there who named a child "Linneer." No Lanier Brewer records are found in North Carolina before 1787 and in the 1790 Census for Moore Co., N. C. was a Lanier Brewer with two males over 16, four under 16, and four females. This, perhaps, was the son of Lanier and Joanna.

In "Renfro Valley Bugle" under 'Kinfolks' for July, 1961, James Wiley Wallis, born 1836, died 1923, had made a statement now published by a relative to the effect that his grandfather on his mother's side was George Brewer. George's father was Lanier Brewer who had 30 boys and three girls--he had two wives (maybe three) and and lived in North Carolina. George Brewer's wife was Jane Butler before she married. She and George had eight children: Charlity, Henry, Jonas, Sally, Wiley, Sampson, Polly (evidently the Mary Ann, mother of James Wiley Wallis) and George, Jr. George and Jane had differences in their later years and lived apart. He said they were of Wayne Co., Tenn and the boys may be located in the 1850 Census.

George Brewer: The George Brewer of the 1760 will in Brunswick appears to be of another Brewer family, one of the brothers of George of the 1744 will. I place him as a son of William of the 1749 will, and many of his family remained in Brunswick.

In Northampton Co., N. C. there is a will for a George Brewer (Grimes' "North Carolina Wills" and Olds' "North Carolina Wills"). It was written Jan. 25, 1751 and proved at August Court, 1757 and named wife and executrix, Mary; sons, Rawle, George, Matthew and John. George was in North Carolina as early as 1739 and in 1763 John Brewer, his brother, was also of Northampton Co.; N. C. for that year he and Oliver, then of Orange Co., N. C. disposed of their 200 acres in Brunswick County.

Nathaniel Brewer: There is nothing in Brunswick records about Nathaniel. The Nathaniel Brewer in Chatham Co., N.C. records could be his son. The N.C. Nathaniel had two sons mentioned in the records, David born ca. 1753 and Daniel born 1773.

John Brewer: I have nothing positive on this John Brewer other than that he was first in Northampton Co., N.C. and then in Chatham Co. Possibly the John Brewer, Sr., in the 1790 Census was a son. That John Brewer, Sr. had among others, John Brewer, Jr. and Amos. Amos Brewer's children were of Jackson Co., Ohio in 1836 when Amos' estate was settled and a portion included his inheritance from John, Sr.

Burrell Brewer is the only child of George Brewer's (1744) by his second wife, Alice, who has been identified in records. Burrell Brewer married Elizabeth Patrick in North Carolina and then went to Georgia. He was born in 1730 and died in 1799; Elizabeth died in 1800. (Compendium of American Genealogy, p. 792 and Biographical Dictionary of American Congress, 1775-1927). Burrell and Elizabeth had the following children who lived: Patrick, Sarah who married a Mr. Soujourner; Adelia who married a Mr. Boyd; William who married Elizabeth Holman; John who went to South Carolina; James who died young, leaving two or three small children, one of whom was Burrell Brewer; Nancy who married George Brittain; Susan who married first Sandy Boling and then his brother Henry Boling; Rebecca who married a Mr. Lewis and had a large family in Burke Co., Ga.; Elizabeth who married John Paschal; and Agnes who married John Paschal on Nov. 23, 1802. The names of Burrell Brewer's children were secured from an old book "Ninety-four Years," 1871, by George Washington Paschal. (There were Burwell Brewers in Wayne Co., Tenn.)

Nicholas Brewer, Jr. and William Brewer were sons of Nicholas and grandsons of George Brewer (1744).

In Chatham Co., N.C., Deed Book 10, p. 311, Sept. 10, 1820, we find:

Mimy Brewer, Ancil Brewer, Mark Brewer, Rebecca Brewer, Drury Brewer, Solomon Brewer, Dennis Brewer, all these of Chatham Co., N.C.; Jeremiah Brewer of the State of Tenn.; Randall Brewer and Isham Brewer, both of Highland Co., Ohio; David Moore (son-in-law or grandson) of Rowan Co., N.C. quit claim their share in 100 acres, being part of a tract of 400 acres deeded to Nicholas Brewer, dec'd, by Nicholas Nail. The 1790 Census for Chatham Co., N.C. shows Nicholas with the above large family.

Orange Co., N. C., Will Book E., p. 303:

Will of William Brewer

Written April 2, 1826 and proved Aug. 7, 1833, shows: Dorothy Brewer, wife; Jane Brewer, daughter-in-law, widow of William's son Isham; Joseph Brewer, Benjamin Brewer, Washington Brewer, Isham Brewer, July Brewer, Polly Brewer, grandchildren, children of Isham, dec'd and Jane; William Hatch, George B. Hatch, Sally V. Hatch, grandchildren, the children of Cynthia Brewer who married Thomas Hatch; William B. Bridges, Elizabeth C. Bridges, Mary S. Bridges, grandchildren, children of Winifred Brewer who married Benjamin Bridges on Jan 23, 1810; Sally Brewer Weaver, daughter who married Thomas Weaver. Witnesses to the will were Jesse Neville, John Crabtree and William Thompson.

When Nicholas Brewer, Jr. sold his Brunswick Co., Va. land the deed shows that Nicholas' wife was Winnie. She predeceased him as she was gone by 1820 when his estate was settled in North Carolina.

The preceeding data was supplied by Janice Barber Reddin (Mrs. George B. Reddin) 714 North Main St., Findlay, Ohio 45840, May 31, 1964.

Now let us go on to the Brewers in Wayne, Lawrence and Lewis Counties, Tennessee and Lauderdale County, Ala., all adjoining.

There were a large number of Brewers who came to Wayne Lawrence and Lewis Co., Tenn. (part that was Maury Co.) and Lauderdale Co., Ala. They had many names that were the same as those Brewers from Brunswick Co., Va. who nestled down in Chatham, Orange and adjoining counties in North Carolina at the time of the Revolution and were still there at the time of the 1790 Census. We found Ambrose Brewer, Nicholas Brewer, Henry Brewer, Wiley Brewer, Sanders Brewer, David Brewer, George Brewer, James Brewer, William Howell Brewer, Cornelius Brewer, Burrell Brewer and many other names well set up in the southeast corner of Wayne Co., Tenn and the northeast corner. George Brewer and Cornelius Brewer of similar ages and likely brothers were in the Forth-eight Section of Wayne County. They were there in 1820, 1830, 1840, and 1850 Censuses. Near them was a younger man, Howell Brewer. The older Howell had already moved on to West Tenn. or died as his son Isaac Brewer in 1846 said in his application for Revolutionary War Pension that his father had married again and moved to West Tenn. He said his younger brother George who lived in Wayne Co., Tenn had the old family Bible when he moved to West Tenn. He shows Howell Brewer had wandered around from Brunswick Co., Va., Chatham Co., N. C. and to the Deep River section in Bladen Co., N. C. Howell had moved to Wilkes Co., Ga. where Isaac and likely others were born. Then they moved to Bedford Co., Va. where they stayed two years when he was four or five years of age. From there they moved to Chatham Co., N. C. where he lived until he was twenty-four or twenty-five years of age. From there they moved to Hancock Co., Ga; from there he moved to Blount and McMinn, Co., Tenn. where he remained until 1841; then to Talladega Co., Ala. where Isaac was in 1846 but his father, Howell, had moved on into West Tenn. Simon Brewer, age 75, deposed he was a brother to Isaac. (The writer has a copy of Isaac's application.)

It would seem that Howell Brewer, born in 1722 in Brunswick Co., Va., son of George Brewer, would be too old to be the father of George Brewer, born 1788 and Cornelius Brewer, born 1790; but since Howell had two or more wives, it is possible and seems likely after studying Isaac Brewer's Revolutionary War Pension Application, stating his younger brother George is in Wayne Co., Tenn. and that their father Howell Brewer with another wife had moved on to West Tenn. These families did move back and forth to West Tenn. Howell would have been sixty-eight years of age when Cornelius was born, if the dates given are correct, and sixty-six years of age when George was born.

The numerous Brewers in the south part of Wayne County were also likely cousins, uncles and brothers of these two men. About 1893 Mr. Richard Brewer sold his farm on lower Butler and moved to Waynesboro and after that some of his children moved to Forth-eight section.

Cornelius Brewer, born about 1790 in North Carolina, died about 1875 at his son, Rogal Fauguson (Forgerson) Brewer's home in Lawrence Co., Tenn. when the writer's mother was five years old. Margaret H. Brewer remembered her grandfather Cornelius being down sick and dying at their home. I believe they said Cornelius was buried on Brush Creek, likely in an unmarked grave.

Cornelius Brewer and his wife Mary Staggs had a large family. Mary Staggs, born in 1794, was the daughter of Joseph Staggs and his wife Fannie Nesbitt, who came to Wayne Co., Tenn at a very early date in 1815 (Goodspeed's History, 1886) Among the children of Cornelius Brewer were: Jacob, Isom (Isham) Meridith, David, George, Henry, Gideon, Rogal Forguson (Fauguson) and some girls, Nellie Rowena, Winnie and at least another girl or boy. These all lived to be grown.

Meredith (Merida) Brewer, son of Cornelius Brewer, had at least two sons, Neal (Cornealius) and Steve. Steve married Lillie Thomason. Meridith Brewer, born in 1820 in Tenn., married Neaty _____, born in 1819.

Isom Brewer, son of Cornelius, born in 1821 in Tenn. married Sarah Staggs, born in 1820 in Tenn. They had the following children in the 1850 Census: Henry Brewer, b. 1840; Rogal Brewer, b. 1843; Mary Brewer, b. 1846; Lewis Brewer, b. 1849; likely others after that date. He was living in the 12th district of Lawrence Co., Tenn. at that time.

I do not have any records on the other children of Cornelius Brewer, just vague memories of my mother talking about her uncles and cousins, other than my grandfather, Rogal Forgerson (Fauguson, Ferguson) Brewer, born 1832 in Wayne Co., Tenn. near Old Wayne Furnace. His father bought and sold more than one farm. As public works, the iron mines, the furnaces, washers, opened up in the area, the young men began to leave the farms and go to work for wages.

Rogal Brewer married Sarah Ann Frierson Brown, daughter of John F. Brown who was the son of David Brown (b. 1766 in Va.) They were married in Lewis Co., Tenn.

The Civil War broke out about two years after they married. At that time they were living at Henryville, Tenn., the oldest settlement in Lawrence Co. Capt. Armstrong came recruiting men for the South's defense. This was in May 1861. He had a small band, a drum and probably a fife, etc. Rousing speeches were made and rousing music was played. Sarah Ann was at home expecting a baby in August and could hear the "goings-on". After the music, men were urged to come forward and join the rank "to save their dear Southland from the Yankee demons" who were coming to take away their freedom and their states rights. Men did step forward amid rousing cheers. Among these was Henry Brown, brother of Sarah Ann Brown Brewer. When his name was shouted out, she said she "knew Rogal would be next." Sure enough, he was. They were called up in July and sent to Camp Trousdale. It would take too much space to give a complete history of the four years spent in the Confederate Infantry. We still have the little Testament given him by Capt. Samuel Armstrong in 1861 which he carried through the war. My niece has the buttons from his uniform that he wore home. Sarah Ann went back to her father's where their son, Cornelius Brewer, was born. (They had a terrible time with the bushwhackers and armies. They took everything they had to eat. They lived on the Matchez Trace.)

Rogal Faugerson (Forgerson) Brewer would frequently be listed as Royal Brewer. He finally just used his

My dear Mrs. Bryan:

I find from the Confederate Pension office that one R. F. Brewer received a pension and the information given me was that he was born in Wayne County, Tennessee, 1833, enlisted May 1861 in Armstrong's Company under Col. Martin. He was wounded in the battles of Shiloh and Bean's Station, once in the leg, once in the mouth. He was in service to the end of the war and was paroled at Appomattox Court House in Virginia April 10, 1865.

The above is his statement. His parole is attached.

Sincerely,
Mrs. John Trotwood Moore

Now let us take a look at more possibilities for the other Brewer families in Wayne Co., Tenn. It appears that most of them came from North Carolina but had stopped on the way in Georgia, other counties in Tennessee Kentucky, and Alabama.

George Brewer, b. 1690, died 1744 in Brunswick Co., Virginia. (See Will). His children began moving around. He had a son Lanier who had a son George Brewer who married Jane Butler. They had the following children: Charity, Henry, Sally (Sarah), Polly (Mary Ann) who married a Wallace and had a son, John Wiley Wallace, and George Brewer, Jr. See excerpt from Renfro Valley News, July, 1961 p. 505 in this book. John Wiley Wallace states that they are "all of Wayne Co., Tenn."

Jane Butler Brewer is shown living with their son George in the 1850 Census in Wayne Co., Tenn. (It is said George and his wife Jane had a disagreement and they were living apart at the time (Mrs. Reddin)

Henry Brewer, son of George and Jane Butler Brewer, was born ca. 1814 in North Carolina (Wayne Co. Census, 1880.) He died in Wayne Co., Tenn. He was located in the southeast part of the county, probably on Butler Creek. About 1847 he married Parmelia Risner, born ca. 1825, of Dutch descent. Their children were:

3. Willie Brewer

Wiley Franklin Brewer, son of Wiley Valentine Brewer, b. Mar. 16, 1878; lived on Shawnee at the water mill; married Emma Todd, daughter of Jack Todd. (She had a brother Frank Todd who married Bula Adams, daughter of Daniel Adams of Shawnee at Millrock. He had a half brother Dudley whose mother was Abbie (?) Smith.) The children of Wiley Franklin Brewer were:

1. Howard Brewer, b. 1907; m. Mary Dixon, dau. of Billy Dixon
2. Mattie Brewer
3. Kathleen B. Brewer

The Dixon Family were singers. They lived about one mile below the Brewers. Mr. Billy Dixon and wife Sarah had Milford, Alvin, Mary, Velma, Naomi, Grayson and Warden. Howard Brewer and Mary Dixon had James Wiley Brewer and Bennie Howard Brewer; lived in Collinwood, Tenn.

Mattie Brewer, daughter of Wiley Franklin Brewer and Emma Todd, married Sam Paul Morgan. Their children were:

1. Boyd Morgan
2. Sam Paul Morgan, Jr.; lived in West Va.

Kathleen Brewer, daughter of Wiley Franklin Brewer and Emma Todd, married A. T. Walker and had a daughter, Joyce Walker

Sophronia Belle Brewer, b. Mar. 8, 1876 in Wayne Co., Tenn.; buried in McGlamery Cemetery near Collinwood, Tenn.; married James Stricklin, son of Sam Stricklin of McGlamery Stand, near Collinwood; buried at McGlamery Cemetery. James (Jim) Stricklin was way laid and shot one night while returning to his hotel room in Waynesboro, Tenn. He was a U. S. Marshall or Revenue Agent at the time and there were dangerous enemies who were out to destroy him. It was said that he had "the goods" on some men and could send them to prison. He was near the southwest corner of the square near Mr. Tom Whitby's shop. The hotel was across the town square. The killer hid behind the wheels of a wagon near the shop and apparently took dead aim. Mr. Stricklin lived a few hours. He died at the hotel. He was never able to speak. He was living in Collinwood at the time. (The writer, a child of 12, remembers the funeral and the great commotion the crime created. No one was ever arrested or tried for the murder. There were all kinds of rumors and suppositions as to the guilty but nothing was done about it.)

Sophronia Belle Brewer and her husband Jim Stricklin had one son, Bannie (not sure of spelling) He had poor eyesight, especially at night. He married Lois Busby of Lawrenceburg, Tenn. They had a family but number not known. Bannie moved to Florida and became an officer of the law and was shot down, reportedly by criminals.

Flora Ethel Brewer, b. Aug. 16, 1887 in Wayne Co., Tenn.; died in Clifton, Tenn.; married Iley Stricklin of Wayne Co. He died in Wayne Co. and is buried in Clifton. Their children were Mabel Stricklin and Peggy Stricklin.

Mabel Stricklin married Walter Brewer, son of Sanders ("Bud") Brewer. They had five children: Walter Brewer, Jr., Charles Brewer, Jean Brewer, Rita Jane Brewer and Patsy Brewer.

Walter Brewer, Sr. was elected sheriff of Wayne Co., Tenn. He served well but died in office. Mabel, his widow was elected to fill his unexpired term as sheriff. She did a fine job and was always popular with the people. After her term as sheriff she operated a restaurant and motel in Waynesboro, Tenn. near the foot of the bridge that crosses Green River just east of the square. It was a nice restaurant. A few years ago she retired and built a beautiful home in front of the Junior High School where she resides. After retirement she was elected to the City Council of Waynesboro.

Parmelia Frances Brewer, daughter of Wiley V. and Francis Smith Brewer, was born Feb. 19, 1889 in Wayne Co.; married Will J. Wisdom; had at least one child, Bonnie Wisdom.

Brewers
Charlie Brewer, b. Aug. 27, 1892 in Wayne Co., married (1) Ella Bryant; had one son, Glen Brewer. Glen married Mattie Francis Bromley, daughter of Harvey Bromley and Mary Joe Hays (See Bromley and Brewer). Glenn and Mattie Francis headed the Bank of Collinwood for many years and until the present day. Mr. and Mrs. Bromley owned most of the stock in the old Bank of Collinwood, which Mr. Bromley operated. He had served as County Court Clerk of Wayne County and held a federal job. After Mr. Bromley died the Collinwood Bank became affiliated with the Bank of Waynesboro with the understanding that Mattie Francis and her family continue to manage the institution. Mattie Francis had an older brother who joined the Navy. He bled to death after an operation in Philadelphia.

Glenn Brewer and Mattie Frances Bromley had one son, Jasper, who works in the Bank of Collinwood. He is married and has one son. (The Bromleys were from the Cedar Grove community.)

Charlie Brewer, son of Wiley Valentine Brewer, married second to Muriel Reeves and had two sons: Herbert Brewer and Martin Brewer, both born in Wayne Co., Tenn.

Harvey Brewer, son of Wiley V. Brewer and Francis (Fannie) Smith, was born ca. 1894; lived near McGlamery Stand; buried at McGlamery Cemetery. He was a farmer and married Myrtle McGee, daughter of John McGee. She was a sister to Mildred McGee Turman, wife of J. Frank Turman and Mamie McGee Brewer, wife of Buchanan ("Buck") Brewer. Harvey Brewer and Myrtle McGee had one son, Earl Lucas Brewer. He married Peggy Turnbow and they have a son named Michael.

Earl Lucas Brewer was a banker, serving with the Bank of Waynesboro, Tenn.; after he left the bank he went into insurance and real estate.

Daniel Proctor Brewer, son of Wiley Valentine Brewer and second wife Sarah Francis Smith, was born Dec. 1, 1902 in Wayne Co., Tenn. He became a teacher. he married Charlie Mae Culp; married second to Alice Wall; no data on family.

Susanna Brewer, daughter of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born ca. 1852 in Wayne Co. (no data)
James Brewer ("Jim Boy") son of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born ca. 1854. (no data)

Emma Brewer, daughter of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born ca. 1858 in Wayne Co., Tenn. (no data)

Bleaten Brewer, daughter of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born ca. 1860; married Frank Clayton. (no further data)

Henry Brewer, Jr., son of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born ca. 1862. (no further data)

Dora Brewer, daughter of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born ca. 1872 in Wayne Co., Tenn. She married a Lindsey, it is thought. The writer remembers this woman but is not sure if she married "Buddie" Lindsey but thinks so. She was about 50 years of age in 1922-26 and looked much younger. They lived at McGlamery Stand, near Collinwood; no children now known.

Josie Brewer, daughter of Henry Brewer and Parmelia Risner, was born about 1864 in Wayne Co., Tenn. She married Daniel Adams of Millrock on Shawnee Creek. He was a farmer. They had one daughter, Beulah, who married Frank Todd, son of Jack Todd. They had two children: Louise Todd, b. ca. 1916 and J. D. Todd, b. ca. 1918.

Beulah had a long lingering illness. Her mother and father moved into the Todd home to care for her and the children. After her death they continued to take care of the children. Frank Todd operated a store and carried on other business at Collinwood, Tenn.

George W. Brewer was born ca. 1803 in North Carolina and came to Wayne County at an early date. He married twice. Older members of the family say the children were by the first wife. Her name is not now known to me. He married second to Harriet M. Whitten, born 1810 in South Carolina. It seems that George's children who were reared by this woman were devoted to her. The name Harriet appears several times among the grandchildren. George W. Brewer reportedly had these children by his first wife:

Lewis A. Brewer, b. 1831 in Tenn.; married Hannah Lackey. Hannah had two sisters, Sarah Porter Lackey and Mary Lackey. Sarah Porter Lackey married Richard M. Johnson Brewer, brother to Lewis A. Mary Lackey married Lynn Stutts who had children Lotta, and Ken Stutts.

Martha Brewer, b. ca. 1835 in Tenn.; m. (1) Bromley; had children: Sam Bromley, James Bromley and Jasper Bromley; m. (2) Wm. Sweeney (Swinea) and had children: Wm. Pate (Bill Pate) Swinea who married a Phillips; Nancy D. Swinea who married a Stutts.

James H. Brewer, son of George W. Brewer, b. 1842.

are grandchildren of George Brewer and Sarah Lanier through their son Lanier Brewer.

George W. Brewer ^{Brewer 16} may be the son of George Brewer and Jane Butler. It is probable that George W. and Henry (b. 1814; m. Parmelia Risner) are brothers. This needs more study. If people would put their knowledge together it could be solved.

Enoch Brewer was in Wayne County at an early date but apparently not as early as 1820 but he may have been across the line in Alabama.

A report of a sale of the goods of Enoch Brewer is recorded in the County Court Minutes of Wayne Co., Tenn. during the years 1837-1840; so Enoch Brewer was dead by that time. Listed among those making purchases or otherwise involved in the sale were: Saunders Brewer, Henry Brewer, Nathan Martin; Plummer Daniels; L. A. Brewer, Riley Brewer, A. J. Brewer, J. W. Horton, J. P. Garrett. Administrator of the will was George W. Brewer. We have no proof at this time that these were son and sons-in-law of said Enoch Brewer, but it is highly likely that some or most of them were. R. J. Cyfert is the one that I questioned for I believe him to be Robert Jasper Cyfert, son of Jesse Cyfert of Indian Creek. The other names are all common names in the Butler Creek and Cypress Creek locale.

If this is true, Enoch Brewer possibly had sons: George W. Brewer, Saunders Brewer, Henry Brewer, Riley (Rial?) Brewer and L. A. Brewer and possibly daughters married to: Nathan Martin; Plummer Daniels, J. W. Horton, and J. P. Garrett. Or George W. Brewer may have been the son of George Brewer and Jane Butler and a grandson of Lanier Brewer.

Summary of the Brewers

The Brewers were a prolific family, running toward numerous boys. There are now Brewers everywhere. We have traced them from Flanders in Europe to England where they scattered to various counties during the period of time from 1066 when they arrived in England until 1628 when we found them owners of Stanley's Hundred and Brewer's Neck on the James River and very active in politics, a period of over 500 years.

From Jamestown they moved inland. In 1680 George Brewer was born in Brunswick Co. Va. (note this is almost 300 years ago.) George Brewer married (1) Sarah Lanier and second Alice _____. He died and his will was probated in 1744, Howell Brewer being the administrator.

Several of these sons migrated to North Carolina to the counties of Orange, Chatham, Bladen and neighboring counties cut off from these. They were easily found in deeds, wills and in the 1790 U. S. Census. Several of them participated in the Revolutionary War.

After the war, and perhaps before, they began migrating to South Carolina, Georgia and East Tennessee. Some traveled back and forth a number of times and even back to North Carolina (see Howell Brewer's wanderings). So by 1820 we find several in the new county of Wayne, including Cornelius and George, sons and/or grandsons of Howell. They reared large families in the northeast part of Wayne County and the northwest corner of Lawrence County, Tenn. In the southern part of Wayne County on Butler Creek we found several more families believed to be children and grandchildren of Lanier Brewer. Lanier and Howell were brothers. George Brewer, son of Lanier Brewer had married Jane Butler. They had children: Charity, Henry, Jonas, Sally, Wiley, Polly and George, Jr. This may be our George W. (father of Richard W. J. and Lewis A.) so called to distinguish him from his father and perhaps cousins.

Please pool your findings.!

359 John F. Brown

Dist. No. 13, Lawrence County, Tennessee

365 Anna Brown

(Note: Erasures had been made in both places on the original tax list. The land belonging to the Brown family was listed in the name of Anna F. Brown and was a gift from her husband's father, David Brown. The assessor started to list the land in district 12 where the Browns were living in 1857 but crossed it out. Then in the assessment in the 13th district, the assessor listed the place to John F. Brown but crossed it out and wrote in Anna, but the words "John F." can easily be discerned under the word "Anna." The 1870 U.S. Census shows the house of David Brown unoccupied.)

Note: Was this Sanders Brewer the Sanders Brewer mentioned in the Sale of Enoch Brewer's estate of which George W. Brewer was the Administrator: This Sanders was born about 1828 in Tenn. We note here that George W. Brewer, the father of Richard ("Dick") M. Johnson Brewer, was born about 1803 in North Carolina. This Sanders could have been a younger son of Enoch or an older son of George W. Brewer, father of Richard M. Johnson Brewer who was the father of Snow McMillan Brewer who married Wilton May Morrow, daughter of Robert L. Morrow and wife Margaret Henderson Brewer, born near Henryville, Lawrence Co., Tenn.

Note: At this time this is the only Brewer found in the 1880 Census in the Sixth District of Wayne County. There were, however, numerous Brewers in the north end of Lawrence County, Tenn., which adjoins Wayne; evidently, they had moved over the line or had moved to Lewis Co, or West Tennessee and on westward.

DEDICATION

My work in compiling this volume was inspired by my conviction that there is moral strength in knowing the facts of ones ancestry. Pride of origin adds confidence and character to any man and contributes materially to the total of qualities that make for usefulness and success. If, my sons and your posterity, I can gain your attention long enough for you to appreciate the hardship, resolution and sheer determination of our simple but inspired old pioneer fathers and mothers,——who, with scarcely more than their bare hands, conquered the ocean and subdued the wild Savages——who climbed the mountains, bridged the rivers and rolled back the forests to make room for the Land of Freedom,——whose sons and daughters, following in their footsteps, hewed out and set the framework for the glorious structure of our Republic;——if you learn by whose hand these things have been achieved,——if you take pride in having in your veins the blood of these Ancestors whose toil and sacrifice built this Nation——if by these I can make you love your Country more, or, by greater sacrifice and devotion, serve it with greater selflessness, I shall be repaid.

To this purpose and to my three sons:

George Edward Brewer

Robert Lafayette Brewer.

Charles Denton Brewer

and their posterity, I humbly dedicate this book.

Edward Denton Brewer

INTRODUCTION

I acknowledge my indebtedness to our stout kinsman, Colonel John Levering, of Lafayette, Indiana, whose labors in compiling that excellent work, "The Levering Family", in 1897, served me so well with authentic and understandable data about many of the older generations. Without it, I would have been helpless to make a start.

Though his history of Leverings goes far beyond the pioneer days in Bedford County, Pennsylvania, I have been unable to trace the Pecks or Fishes beyond those years. Indeed, it is only by his references to these (to him, collateral) branches of our lineage that I was able to find the place to search for them. Too much time has passed——too much decay of history and legend——too much indifference to the Romance of the Early Days——so you must be satisfied with the little that can now be found.

The Brewers, though generally considered to be English, are Norman-Flemish in origin, having come originally from La Bruviere, near Bethune in ancient Flanders. The first Brewer to England was Drogo de Bruviere, who came with William the Conqueror and whose name appears on Battle Abbey Roll. Important in British history is Baron William Brewer, named in Greens Short History of The English People as legal adviser to King Henry III, who advised the King to sign the confirmation of Magna Charta. He is mentioned in the Dictionary of National Biography in a favorable sketch.

Henry Brewer, of Bedford County, Pa., I am convinced, was the son of George Brewer and was born in Brunswick County, Virginia, though possibly for many years before coming to Pennsylvania, he had not made his home near his birthplace. He kept title to his land, however, and sold it in 1772 to James Wall just before, in 1773, he bought land in Pennsylvania. George was a Mason, as was Henry also and the Walls were either related to them or old family friends, for we find John Wall, probably James' brother, also an emigrant from Virginia, signing Henry's Will as a witness in Pennsylvania, twenty-seven years later.* In 1743, (Book 2, P. 406, Brunswick Co. records,) as John Wall Jr., he had witnessed a deed in which George Brewer was grantee.

The Will of Henry Brewer, made in 1799, obviously on his death bed, is so identical with that of George Brewer, made fifty-eight years before and two hundred miles or more to the southward, that I am forced to conclude that Henry Brewer actually had a copy of his father's Will, from which the preamble was copied verbatim and that the few differences of a word or two are merely due to faulty copying. Can you compare these two Wills and come to any other conclusion?

"In the name of God, Amen, the 13th day of July, 1741, I, George Brewer, in the County of Brunswick, Virginia, being very sick and weak in body, but of perfect mind and memory, thanks be given unto God therefor, calling unto mind the mortality of my body and knowing that it is appointed for all men once to die, do make and ordain this my Last Will and Testament, that is to say principally and first of all

*There was another Henry Brewer whose will was probated in Brunswick County in 1804—Will book 7, page 18,—who confused me greatly but I have identified him as the son of Jesse Brewer mentioned in Jesse's will—Book 6, Page 283.

There was also Henry Brewer whose wife was Cynthia (not Christiana) who executed a deed to Arthur Emmason—Book 11, Page 362,—but I found where he had gotten the land conveyed from John Brewer—270 acres—for "5 shillings and love and affection" so I conclude he is John's son and not our Henry who is George's son.

Henry's Will was probated March 5, 1799. Considered that the county seat was fifty miles away and that a proper period elapsed between death and probate, Henry must have truly been on his deathbed when he executed it.

The similarity of family first names, the Masonic connection, the amazing similarity of George's and Henry's Will the friendship with the Wall family, the coincidence of date of sale of Virginia land and buying Pennsylvania land, the chronological fitness of Henry's generation with George in Virginia, the historical fact that Western Pennsylvanians was settled principally by Virginia backwoodsmen and the tradition that Henry was a "Long Hunter" who came from the South, all join to convince me that, in this, I am not be wrong. Beyond George, the already well established genealogy of the family, as set out in the Compendium of American Genealogy, is too clear for dispute.

For my account of the Robertsons, I was obliged to content with the information that could be supplied by George and Sallie Robertson, of Pottsville, Arkansas, who excellent memories of things of long ago have enabled me to give a fair account of their ancestry and personal history.

without the aid of any writing or record, except that which they themselves had made. Of the years before their memories begin, we can only resort to the histories of the places where their forebears lived and speculate that their lives were in step with the times and their histories very like those of the places. They are first found as families at Social Circle, Georgia.

The seventh generation of the Brewers, the Pecks, and the fifth generation of the Leverings are first found intermarried, in Bedford County, Pennsylvania, near Needmore, between Cumberland, Maryland and McConnellsburg, Pennsylvania, on the eastern slope of Sidelinghill Mountain. Their histories are very similar for they intermarried many times, in the years between the Revolution and the settlement of Ohio, in the 1800's.

The Leverings' and Brewers' established genealogies go back several generations further and live, in tradition and romance, several centuries earlier than that.

The Fishes were English and came from Loudoun County, Virginia, direct to Ohio. Further back we have no record, but tradition relates that they earlier lived in Maryland.

Old Conrad Peck I and Old Henry Brewer I, in tradition, comrades in the Indian Wars, came up the Tonoloway in search of new lands to clear and conquer, and settled down to found the Bedford County dynasty, even before the Revolution. They were Indian fighters—Long Hunters—men of buckskin clothes and coon-tailed caps—men whose hands knew not the pen but to whose forest skill the trails of the Indians and wild animals were an open book.

The descendants of these families are the principal subject of this book, but, of necessity, I have been confined to those lineally related to us, for, if it were otherwise, this volume must have been swelled to a five foot shelf.

From this fountain head, in the Land of the Juniata, have come half a dozen or more prolific and foot-free generations, to whose pioneering souls the valleys, mountains and ocean sands of the Great West have been a perpetual lodestone that forever drew them on. Their names are written on the rolls of honored pioneers of every State west of the Alleghenies and their bones are scattered on every battlefield and ocean deep where men at arms have raised the Stars and Stripes. I could not trace them all if every power in the land were at my control.

Now, turn to the Master Family Tree in the front of this book and study the relationships of the various families of which we are a part.

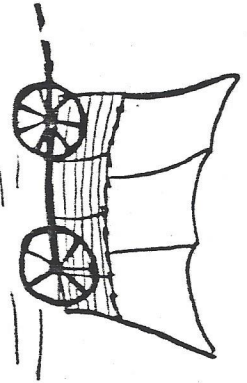

Take, for instance, the family of George Brewer, born in 1670. He had ten children by his first wife and about six by his second wife whom I did not name. His son, Henry, had ten children and if all Henry's brothers and sisters had had ten children, there would be 160 children in the second generation after George. If the next generation had ten children each, as the one son, John, did, there would be 1,600 children. If the next generation had only five children each (William actually had eight), there would be 8,000 in the fourth generation. If the next generation had only five children each (Denton actually had five), there would be 40,000 in the fifth generation. If each of them had five children (my father, Lloyd, did have five), there would be 200,000 children in my generation, the sixth.

If George had had four brothers and sisters (and he probably had more), my generation runs up to 1,000,000. If John III had four brothers and sisters, it runs up to 5,000,000. If John II had had four brothers and sisters (and he did have for we have their names listed), there are 25,000,000. If John I of Brewer's Neck, had four brothers and sisters, we have 125,000,000 persons in my generation, all equally related to me and every one of them direct descendants of Thomas Brewer of Loudon and his wife, Miss Drake. I have only three children, but if all the others of my generation had three children also, you would have 375,000, -000 relatives exclusively in your own generation.

I repeat, I cannot trace them all and there is probably not enough paper in the world to write all their histories.

HOW TO USE THE BOOK

Principal families are designated by the family initial. Individuals are designated by a number following the initial that fixes the genealogical order of the individual. If he had children, you may find them by observing the letter and number placed at the lower right of his personal history and turning to that number elsewhere in the book, where you will find his children named in order of birth. Where a family of children is set out and only our lineal ancestor is to be treated, his name is printed in heavier type and will be followed by his personal history in the next paragraph.

Each family subdivision is preceded by a "Family Tree" or diagram indicating the ancestry of the individuals to be treated.

Personal histories are, of necessity, rather brief—partly because, in many cases, facts are few, and partly because space is limited.

The Family Story, which augments these brief histories, will help you to know these Old Timers more intimately. It is a mixture of fact, tradition and romance of our people and of the early settlement of Our Country. I hope that you will read it, not as a history firmly fixed in fact, but as the character sketches and life stories of some old people, whom, through these researches, I have come to know, respect and love as I had never thought I could.

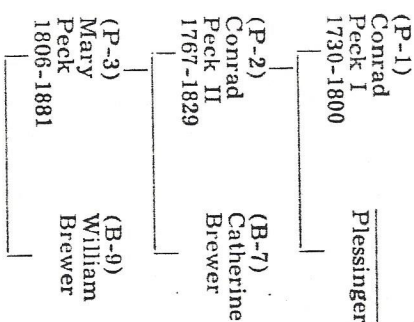

On my side, I have done research on the Leverings, Brewers, Pecks, Fishes and Brysons.

On your Mother's side, are the Robertsons, Colstons, Burns and Smiths.

At all times you should keep checking back to the Master Tree in the front of the book.

CHAPTER V

The Brewers

A thousand years ago, on the misty coast of Flanders near the town of Bethune, in the little village of la Bruviere there lived a family of Norman-Flemish gentry, now recognized as the progenitors of the Brewer family in America.

When William the Conqueror invaded Britain in the year 1066, a member of that family, Drogo de la Bouere or Bruviere, was among the invaders. His wife was a cousin of William and The Conqueror regarded him highly and placed his name on the immortal Roll of Honor of Battle Abbey at Senlac or Hastings and there it is today, a mute yet shouting witness of our ancestors' prowess.

"DROGO DE BREVERE"

Dugdale says, "the lordships whereof he was possessed, appears by the Conqueror's Survey," are distinctly set down and held by Adeliza, Countess of Albemarle, Odo's single instance throughout the work; but Holderness, he adds, "was not given him till after Survey." There he is right, as we shall find in the following notice of an undoubted companion of the Conqueror whose name does not appear in the roll of Battle Abbey, but who is presumed to have been an ancestor of the De Brewers or Briweres, so powerful in the Thirteenth Century. According to the Book of Meaux and the Register of Fountains Abbey, which I have already quoted, this Drogo was a Fleming of Holderness, of which he built the strong Castle of Skipsey, and other considerable estates in various counties, amongst them Bytham in Lincolnshire. By the same authorities he is said to have married a kinswoman of the King, — how related to him, or how named, is not stated, nor whether her hand had been bestowed upon him as part of the guerdon he had merited. Whoever she was, Drogo killed her — whether by accident or with "malice prepense, does not appear in the indictment. His subsequent conduct, however, was that of a guilty man. He hastened to the King and pretended that he was desirous to take his wife to Flanders; but not having sufficient money at command for the purpose, craved assistance from his royal connection. The King, not doubting his story, gave or lent to him the sum requested, with which Drogo wisely made the best of his way to the coast, and took ship for the Low Countries. The King, on learning the truth sent orders for his arrest, but too late. Drogo was beyond his reach. He lost no time, however, in seizing his estates, some of which he appears to have bestowed on Odo of Champagne, who, according to the same writers, is said to have complained that the soil of Holderness was sterile and would grow nothing but oats; and his wife having presented him with a son, named Stephen, he prayed the Conqueror to give him some land on which he could grow wheat, that he might feed his (William's) nephew; whereupon the King gave him Bytham, another forfeited manor of Drogo's and other places.

Now if the story about Drogo be true, the slaying of his wife and flight to Flanders must have taken place in 1086, for up to August in that year he was in possession of all his estates, and shortly afterwards William quitted England never to see it more. Drogo's personal interview with him must, therefore, have been during the few months that elapsed between the completion of the survey and the King's sailing for Normandy; either at the time of his holding his last great Witan at Salisbury (1st August), to which all the principal land holders in the kingdom were summoned, or while he was subsequently residing in the Isle of Wight, waiting the collection of the money extorted from all against whom he could bring any charge whether by right or otherwise—that final robbery of his English subjects, with the booty of which he departed amid "curses not loud but deep," to die deserted, dishonoured, and despoiled in his native land." (The Conqueror and His Companions, by J. R. Planche, Vol. I, P. 126.)

It thus appears that Planche did not think Drogo's name was on the Roll, but you will see by the Duchess of Cleveland, hereinafter quoted, that his name was on the Roll as "Bonueier." Names were written in longhand, phonetics were not well established, even letters were given different sounds by different writers. Drogo de Bruviere, in which the "v" was pronounced as "w" was well known in English history. Not finding a name on the Roll spelled in this manner, Planche decided Drogo had not been included. It is clear from the identity of Bonueier, as noted by Duchess of Cleveland, that he is the same person as Bruviere, and is on the Roll.

So we see that Drogo de Bruviere, Drogo de la Bouerier and Drogo de Bonueier, is all the same person. He was a Fleming and held the Seigneurie of La Bruviere, near Bethune, in ancient Flanders, in the region of France, though close to Belgium. He came with The Conqueror to England in the invasion and in recognition of his services, received more than a hundred manors and, in addition to having married a cousin of William The Conqueror, he was a man of great importance in Norman-England for the first twenty years after the invasion. For some reason, he killed his wife, the cousin of The Conqueror and fled back to his native Flanders, where he was safe from punishment. The Conqueror confiscated all his lands and gave them out to other favorites. Drogo's children, born either in Flanders before the invasion, or in England thereafter, did not follow Drogo to Flanders for they had lived nearly twenty years in England and doubtless considered it their home.

"BONUETIER

This most probably stands for Bouerier, "Drogo de la Bouerier," as the monks of Meaux give the name. It is from their chronicle that we learn what little we know of this mysterious Fleming. He probably held the Seigneurie of La Bruviere, near Bethune, and is styled "miles probus et in armis probatus." He had married a cousin of the Conqueror's and, it was doubtless to this alliance, no less than to his services in the field, that he owed his great English barony. He received the whole of the so called "isle" of Holderness — at that time a dreary and marshy district, but comprising no less than 87 manors with 27 others in Lincolnshire, of which the most valuable had been Earl Morcar's. He built Skipsea Castle, and must have also had a manor-house at Burstwick, afterwards the caput of the Seigneurie of Holderness. "At either one or the other must have occurred the tragedy that sent Drogo in all haste to court, before the tale might be told, or justice overtake him." (A. S. Ellis.) Of this tragedy I have given an account elsewhere (See "Aunale"), but nothing beyond the bare facts has been preserved. Not even the name of the wife whom he "unhappily killed" has come down to us. We cannot tell who she was or why she was made away with; whether he was stung to sudden frenzy by jealousy, or planned beforehand how she was to die — That the deed was willfully done, his own conduct proves, for he escaped to Flanders with the money he had obtained from the King, and was seen in England no more. Little is known of his descendants, but according to Mr. Planche he is "presumed to have been an ancestor of the de Brewers of de Briveres, so powerful in the 13th Century." Theodoric or Thierry de Bevera, lord of that place and Castellan of Dixmue, his heir probably, occurs several times early in the 12th Century, and married Beatrice, Daughter of Baldwin de Gand, the Grand, Lord of Alost, nephew of Gilbert de Gand of the Survey. (The Battle Abbey Roll, by Duchess of Cleveland, Vol. I, p. 183-4.)

Though Drogo fled back to Flanders in 1086 and never returned to England, his descendants remained and were ever important in English affairs as soldiers, lawyers, court advisers and landed gentlemen. Nicholas Brewer, a follower of Charles II, was exiled to Barbados, died in 1778, and is buried there in St. Michaels Parish Churchyard. Balton William Brewer, in the 13th Century, was influential in advising King Henry III to sign the confirmation of Magna Charta. Baron Brewer had been adviser to King Henry's predecessor and was an active proponent of that mighty document wherein was first written the foundations of English freedom. The family Coat-of-Arms indicates importance on both land and sea.

They were a vigorous, active people and it is not strange that within twenty years from the first Virginia settlement, in 1607, at Jamestown, John Brewer, London merchant, was a partner in the adventure. We do not know when he sailed, but he was there in 1629-30, for he was a member of the House of Burgesses, in those years, and met with them in the little wood church at Jamestown, that preceded the later brick one.

His father's name was Thomas Brewer. He brought in wife and three children with him from England and two more were born in America. And of all these, two, Francis and Mary, died before he did. He lived to the south, across the James River, from Jamestown, and in the Warwick River District and owned two large estates, "Brewers Neck" and "Stanley Hundred."

His descendants moved steadily westward, as the country became settled. Branches sprang off to North Carolina and south as far as Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. They spread westward to Kentucky, Tennessee and Ohio. They were soldiers, legislators, merchants, planters, foxhunters and horsemen. They were woodsmen, Indian fighters, trappers, explorers, and frontiersmen. Their sturdy kinsmen were forever in the vanguard that finally drove the American Frontier into the Pacific. Our own branch separated from the Virginia tree when Henry, the son of George, born in Brunswick County, Virginia, came to Bedford County, Pennsylvania, in the 1760's, just after the peace following the French and Indian War, in which he had been a soldier.

Henry Brewer's son, John, a Revolutionary Soldier, stayed on and died there in Pennsylvania, but John's son, William, moved on to Morrow County, Ohio. And William's son, Denton, my grandfather, stayed on and died in Morrow County, as did my father, Henry Lloyd Brewer.

And so you see us now, as a long line of travellers to the West. Nearly a thousand years of journey—a thousand years of being born and of dying—a thousand years of adventure and conquest—of loving and hoping and striving—and, at the end of it, is You. Something to be proud of, don't you think?

And now you will meet some of these folks—in fact, all of them from Thomas of London, four hundred years ago. We will take them first as far as the children of my grandfather, Denton Brewer. Then we will take each of Dent's children, separately, to date.

ADDIE MAY BREWER McNAY

And now to Addie, the last of Dent's children—a dear, sweet, old lady, whom I shall always remember with tenderness and shall always salute with respect—for she was both those things to me. I saw her but a few weeks before she died and received a letter from her after the telegram that announced her death.
